Loyalists' reject Mounting Rees appeal to take part in a new Executive

"Loyalist" politicians refused, at meetings yesterday with Mr Rees, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, to take part in any Executive formed by the British Government to replace Mr Faulkner's Administration. Faulkner's Administration. The minister said, however, that he would consider talking to the Ulster Workers' Council, the organization that precipitated the former Executive's collapse.

The Government's attempts to replant the seeds of the Constitution Act and form another tution Act and form another power-sharing Administration in Northern Ireland fell on barren ground yesterday when, for the second time in a year, "loyalist" politicians trooped up to Stormont Castle and adamantly refused to play any part in a coalition Executive constructed by the British authorities.

Mr Rees, the province's Secretary of State, must have known that the men who kelped to bring down Mr Faulkner's government this week would not cooperate with him, but even he may have been surprised by the signs of emergent Ulster nationalism.

The leaders of the three parties who formed the now defunct Executive, Mr Faulkner, Mr Gerard Fitt and Mr Oliver Napier. agreed, of course, that power-sharing was the only political system that could operate effectively in Ulster, but the Rev Ian Paisley and his two colleagues, Mr Harry West, of the official Unionists, and Mr William Craig, of Vanguard, would have none of it. Mr Paisley told Mr Rees that the Constitution Act was "a dead duck" and he suggested that a conference of Ulster politicians, from which English-men would be excluded, should men would be excluded, should be held to decide on a new form

Mr West did not even seem concerned by the possibility of a British withdrawal from the province. "I am not unduly worried", he said. "I should not like to see it happening and certainly we are not going to break the link, but if they want to pull out we cannot stop them

Mr Rees apparently told some of the political leaders who visited him that public opinion in Britain was turning against Northern Ireland.

Mr Napier, for example, said that Mr Rees had indicated to him "that British public

Mr West was the first visitor after lunch and he emerged from seeing Mr Rees without receiving any guarantee that Britain would allow fresh elec-tions in the province. That had been the demand of the Ulster Workers' Council, which broke up the Northern Ireland Executive with its 15-day general strike, and it appears that no undertaking was given either to Mr Paisley or to Mr Craig.

"Mr Rees was most anxious to know if we would join in a reconstituted Executive on a power-sharing basis", Mr West said. "We said "no"."

Asked about his refusal to share power with the SDLP, which emerged at the Assembly elections as the only substantial Catholic party. Mr West said: Catholic party, Mr West said:
"I am not telling you that we are against sharing power with Roman Catholics. That is a slur. But we will share power only with those people who accept the constitution of this country. We will not share power with the SDLP under any circumstances because they want a united Ireland."

Mr Paisley not only described the Constitution Act as a dead duck, but also compared the Executive with a horse that had fallen at the first fence and had to be shot.

If all those with withdrawn it would bring down the Army's strength in Northern Ireland from 17,000 to just over 15,000. But no final decision is expected until after the weekend. Talk of a more permanent, complete withdrawal of troops from Ulster, however, finds no friends among the military in their headquarters at Lisburn. Soldiers are aware that any uncertainty over their future might only encourage the IRA gunmen and others who would like to see them go. That is the conventional view. A less conventional one is that the IRA would prefer to shoot at British troops than at Protestants because Protestant reprisals would be less retrained and less discriminating.

Soldiers are disheartened by the collar framework. They have always said that they could hope only to contain the violence, not to end it, and in recent months they have contained it as well as could be expected of them.

Blaze risk in many hotels gives guests too slim a chance of waking up alive, fire chief says

The fire risk in many hotels gave guests far 100 slender a chance of waking up alive, Mr James Flemming, Chief Fire Officer for Hertfordshire, said yesterday. He spoke of the scandal of hotels that still had not registered under the Fire Precautions Act, 1971, and warned them that fire authorities might have to use the "mailed fist approach" to enforce the Act.

Nine Asians arrested after picket fighting

From David Leigh

Nine Asian pickets were arrested in a factory gate clash with policemen outside the Imperial Typeswriter plant in East Park Road, Leicester, yesterday. They will appear before Leicester magistrates today, charged with various offences, including assauk and obstruction tion. The incident follows a month long strike by about 400 of the 1,100 Asians employed at the plant. None of the 400 white plant. None of the 400 white manual workers is on strike.

The company officially dismissed the last of the strikers yesterday and is offering to reemploy only some of them. The Race Relations Board yesterday began to investigate allegations of discrimination at the company's Leicester factories.

Today 200 of the strikers intend to hand in a petition of protest at the London headquarters of the Transport and General Workers' Union, which has opposed the strike by its members.

The police say that about 150 pickets tried to get into the factory at hinchtime to persuade other Asians to join them and fighting broke out when policemen on duty stopped them. A television crew was filming at the time; company officials later suggested that that might have provoked the fighting.

The strike began because of a dispute over bonus payments and allegations that local union officials would not allow Asians to elect their own stewards.

Estate agents say that house prices realized are lower than report published yesterday. The report, based on a survey by the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors and the Department of the Environment, covers the quarter ended February 28 last.

It says that selling conditions in the period deteriorated further as the volume of mortgage commitments undertaken by the building societies was reduced. The economic uncer tainties added to the decline. The survey indicates that the average number of house sales by each agent fell by a fifth from the previous quarter and the ratio of sales to dwellings on sale fell to the lowest level since 1969. There was also a further lengthening of the time taken to effect sales, with the highest re-corded figure since 1966 for the average number of dwellings offered for sale by each agent. The institution said yesterday

The new Triumph 2500 TC.

For anyone torn between the Triumph 2000 and a 2.5 PI.

The Triumph 2500 TC is a different car. And, it's also a very impressive answer to a problem exercising many motoring minds at the present time.

Namely, how to arrange luxury, economy, and performance in just the right proportions for you.

The Triumph 2500 TC is a car with all the smoothness and style traditionally associated with the Triumph 2000 - exhilarated by the extra performance that comes with an engine 25% larger

The result is a five-seater, six-cylinder luxury car that achieves 0 to 50 mph in 8.5 seconds.

And it returns around 33 mpg at a steady 50. In short we've added zip But we've kept the millions the motorist spends on fuel very much in mind. The Triumph 2500 TC sets new high standards of comfort and safety for driver and passengers too. And these new standards are being applied right across the Triumph sixcylinder range.

Look what we're offering:

Reclining front seats in corded Bri-Nylon or 'breathing' vinyl - now with optional head restraints.

New style at-a-glance instruments and a control layout appropriate to the high standards Triumph have already established in this field.

Among the impressive refinements are a seat belt warning light for driver and front seat nassenger, (fitted for the first time to a British production saloon) and the famous Triumph 8-light warning system to keep tabs on every aspect of performance.

Traditional Triumph deep pile carpets and non-glare walnut veneer facia complete the luxury touches for which this range has already gained an enviable reputation.

And childproof door locks, hazard warning lights, and a specially designed driver's rear view mirror complete this new concept in sixcylinder safety.

The new Triumph 2500 TC, the 2.5 PI and the Triumph 2000 are all designed for discerning motorists who appreciate the benefits of six-cylinder motoring. Could you be one of them? Rover Triumph, British Leyland UK Ltd. Coventry. Tel: 0203-75511

Upper Avon to be reopened to navigation after a century and planners safeguard use of London canal

Supporters of waterways see cause for hope

Planning Reporter

It would be difficult to find two more dissimilar stretches of water than the Upper Avon, flowing through the heart of Shakespeare country, and Rain-ham Creek, oozing past an industrial estate in the East End of London. But both are giving champions of inland waterways fresh hope that at long last the tide may be turn-

Tomorrow Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother will officially reopen the Upper Avon to navigation, almost exactly a century since it fell into disuse. The Last night TGWU members from Grangemouth were picketing all the company's major terminals in Scotland, and tanker drivers were refusing to cross the picket lines. Shell and BP supplies nearly half Scotland's oil products and the strike is affecting 1,600 garages it serves. The terminals were meeting restoration has been carried out by the Upper Avon Navigation Trust. Volunteers, Servicemen, trusted prisoners and borstal boys worked on the project, and more than £300,000 was raised through a series of appeals, including £100,000 from an anonymous donor.

Rainham Creek assumed significance last week when, for the first time, the Greater London Council refused planning permission for an industrial development on the ground that Mr Norman Howard, chairman of the council's planning committee, indicated that that was likely to become a general principle. "Our policy is to use London's waterways as an integral part of the transport system and, where possible, to get commercial traffic off the roads and on to the waterways", he said.

Two days later, Mr Howell, Minister of State for the Environment, with responsibility for sport, took up the theme in the Commons. "We ought not to be closing down canals", he said. "We ought to be opening up more canals and building new ones." These incidents may be only straws in the wind, but at least they indicate that the wind is changing. For many years suc-cessive governments have, if not ctively fostered, at least done little to discourage the idea that Britain's waterways are hope-lessly outdated and that it would cost far too much to modernize it would not be exploiting the commercial potential of a water is in decline is precisely that no money has been spent on it. If waterways are old-fashioned their supporters ask, why is it that nearly all Euro-pean countries have invested in huge new arteries to carry long-distance bulk cargoes? Freight carried by canal in The Netherlands increased from 151 million tons in 1963 to 245 million tons in 1971, and in West Germany from 167 million tons to 230 million tons in the same period. By contrast, traffic on British Waterways Board waterways fell during the same period from nine million to 5,500,000 tons. Those figures do not include those for privately owned waterways such as the Manchester Ship Canal, which operates at a is probably not more than about 40 million tons.

One factor that might help to reverse this trend is the growing public opposition to further motorways on environmental grounds. Mr Frederic Doerflinger, chairman of the inland shoping group of the Inland

Waterways Association, which profit, but the annual total for all waterborne freight in Britain

last month produced a report entified Barges or Juggernauts?, estimates that one 500-ton barge can carry the same amount of bulk cargo, such as coal, cement or grain, as 35 heavy articulated

The report called for the establishment of a new inland shipping division within either the Department of the Environment or the Department of Trade. Mr. Mulley, Minister of Transport, is said to be giving the report his urgent attention. If anything is likely to save the waterways board from ex-tinction, it is the introduction of barge-carrying ships. Three dif-ferent systems are in operation, enabling a barge to be loaded at an inland canalside or riverside wharf, towed to the coast and loaded on to a ship, which trans-ports it to an overseas port

The association believes there is no contradiction between commercial and leisure use of water ways. On recreational use, it feels that previous governments have dragged their feet, making encouraging noises but not providing any money. Local authorities have, with a few exceptions, been equally parsimonious.

Fiat chief warns Italy it is on the verge of economic collapse

Rome, May 30

Signor Gianni Agnelli, chairman of Fiat, today said that Italy had only a few months in which to start putting its house in order if it was to avoid the risk of political and economic collapse. He said bankruptcy brought political as well as economic conequences. When there was a

Signor Agnelli was giving his inaugural address as president of the private industrialists confederation, Confindustria, having succeeded Signor Renato Lombardi, the Piedmontese textile industrialists textile industrialist.

His almost unanimous election, by 4,818 votes with 25 blank ballor papers and none against, reflects the importance attached by private industry to having a competent pilot to steer through the present crisis. Italy faced its most difficult period for decades, Signor Agnelli said. "The next six months will be worse. The economic situation is very grave, but even more dangerous are the Ils which undermine the economic political and social system and the environment in which we operate.

It was of little use for the Government to introduce austerity measures of doubtful worth, or to exhort the nation to consume less and produce more, to export more and to keep prices and wages claims down These did not strike at the root of the evil.

He criticized the Government for hamstringing private indus-try for bureaucratic inefficiency and for abstract economic planning.

Private enterprise was deprived of the means to earn its own cash flow, and the relationship between resources and indebtedness was so bad that many Italian companies' shares would not be admitted for bourse quotation in many foreign countries. The overall result was "a waste without pre-cedent in human and material few weeks to plan strategy. Time was short because inflation did not permit delay.

Beyond a certain point, inflation brought a chain reaction which overthrew not only the economic but also the political and social structures of life. "It appears that Italy is approaching this dangerous threshold."

Signor Emilio Colombo, the Treasury Minister, in another pessimistic speech to the meeting, said inflation would at its present rate reach 20 per cent present rate reach 20 per cent by the end of this year. The total of foreign loans was now above the level of reserves. At the end of 1973 foreign indebtedness stood at about 3,000,000 million lire (about £2,000m) against reserves of 3,292,000 million lire, over half of which was in gold.

In the first four months of this year, the balance of payments had shown an average deficit of about 630,000 million lire a month, and a further Z.600,000 million lire worth of loans were contracted. Foreign indebtedness had a limit, depending on a country's credibility abroad. Recession was now a real possibility because of the grave crisis in the balance of payments.

To combat this danger, is would be necessary to take about 2,500,000 million or 3,000,000 million lire out of internal demand. The Government had already introduced some measures of which the import sures, of which the import deposit scheme was the latest. Now, he forecast, further taxa-tion would be necessary.

Britain and Spain resume talks on Gibraltar From Our Correspondent Madrid, May 30

British and Spanish diplomats

British and Spanish diplomats today began exploratory talks on Gibraltar in Madrid, as the result of a British initiative. The discussions at the Spanish Foreign Ministry continued throughour the day.

Spokesmen for both Governments described the talks as non-committal, adding that official Notes issued in London and Madrid said they were in response to a United Nations General Assembly resolution of last December, which expressed "hope" that negotiations on Gibraltar would soon be resumed.

A spokesman for the British Embassy pointed out that the British delegation at the United Nations had objected to the word negotiations" in the text of the resolution, preferring "con-

Sir John Russell, the Ambassador to Spain, delivered a document to the Foreign Ministry in Madrid on April 11 proposing such "conversations". On May 3 the Spanish Government accepted the proposal. US 'is pledged to support anti-terrorist actions

From Moshe Brilliant

Jerusalem, May 30 Mrs Meir, the Prime Minister. told the Parliament today that the United States promised Israel political support for anti-terrorist measures after the Golan Heights disengagement.

Responsible Israelis regarded this as an undertaking to veto United Nations Security Council motions for sanctions against Israel for possible punitive actions against terrorists.

After a nine hours debate, the Knesset by 76 votes to 36 ratified the disengagement agreement and cleared the way for the formal signature tomorrow in Geneva. A Likud Opposition motion approving a separation of forces agreement, but criticizing the terms negotiated by the Government, was defeated by 67 votes to 33.

Mr Dayan, the Defence Minister, disclosed that Syrian forces in the 10-kilometre forces in the 10-kilometre limited forces zone would be reduced from 40,000 to 6,000 men, 400 ranks to 75, and 500 guns to 36.

Mr Ariel Sharon, of Likud, said this did not really represent a separation of forces. He rea separation of forces. He re-called that, as a general in the

Yom Kippur war, he had led his men to the Suez Canal for a distance of 30 kilometres in two

Paul Martin writes from Beirut: Syria's ruling Baath Party tonight endorsed the disengagement accord reached between Syria and Israel. The endorsement emphasized that the separation of forces must be followed by Israel's withdrawal from all Golan and recognition of Palestinian rights.

Versions of the agreement released today make no mention of watertight guarantees that such a withdrawal must follow disengagement. However, Dr Kissinger is known to have given secret assurances to the Israelis and, if the Suez disengagement agreement is followed, similar assurances may have been given

President Sadat of Egypt described Dr Kissinger's latest feat as "another miracle". He said in Cairo: "We welcome the visit of President Nixon to Egypt as a further step towards consolidating our relations."

Mr Kollek foresees withdrawal in Sinai

Dr Henry Kissinger believes that the Syria-Israel agreement will encourage Egypt to continue negotiations with Israel, accord-ing to Mr Teddy Kollek, the Mayor of Jerusalem. Mr Kollek also said in London yesterday that this was one reason Israel agreed to disengage its forces on the Golan Heights.

He thought the next step might well be further negotiations with Egypt for another Israel withdrawal in Sinai. The Israel Government was prepared to withdraw completely from the peninsula eventually, but in

It was ready now to negotiate a partial withdrawal which could return the oil fields to Egypt, although they provided Israel with about 75 per cent of her ruel requirements. It was hoped that Egypt would agree to Israel leasing Sharm el-Sheikh. Mr Kollek said that Jerusa-lem would be the last item on the agenda. Nothing could be done before the future of the West Bank was decided, and conflicting views in Jordan sug-gested that negotiations could be long delayed.

The status of Jerusalem was not negotiable, Mr Kollek said.

President Nixon's lawyers asked the Supreme Court today not to make a "hasty determina-tion" on whether the President tion" on whether the President should submit to a subpoena for White House tapes. They said it would be far better for the President's appeal against a court ruling upholding the subpoena to "run its orderly course" through the district appeals court.

Mr Leon Jaworski, the Watergate special prosecutor, who wants the 64 tapes to prehis case against the seven men indicted for the Watergate cover-up, and also possibly to help them prepare their defence, took the case straight to the Supreme Court when Mr Nixon appealed against the lower court's ruling.

Messages flew between London, Peking and Sian, this ancient capital city of northwestern China, today as Mr Heath ascertained the situation in London and Belfast. Despite a late start he did not cut his programme of sightseeing, which included an enamelware factory, the fine provincial museum, and an ancient sevenstorey pagoda known as the "Big Goose".

Cheering crowds again lined the streets as happened in Shanghai yesterday despite pouring rain. In Shanghai he spent the forenoon cruising on the Whangpoo river and viewing the extensive dockyards where ships from all parts of the world were anchored. Bad weather delayed the flight of Mr Heath and his party in a Trident jet airliner to Sian, capi-tal of Shensi province, where the crowds turned out with drums and cymbals to welcome him. The provincial revolu-tionary committee last night gave a banquet in Mr Heath's honour followed by a song and dance performance.

resign From Fred Emery Washington, May 30

The first serious sign of dissension among Mr Leon Jaworski's staff with the special prosecutor's conduct of the Watergate prosecutions has come with the prosecutions has come with the unexplained resignations of three young lawyers. The three men constituted the "task force" investigating and prosecuting criminal allegations prosecting criminal allegations in the case of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation (ITT). Mr Joseph Connelly, the senior of the three, resigned suddenly last week, amid reports that he was dismayed that Mr Jaworski had allowed Mr Richard Kleindienst to plead guilty to a minor crime.

Mr Kleindienst, during con-firmation hearings in the Senate before he became Mr Nixon's before he became Mr Nixon's second Attorney General in early 1972, lied under oath. But instead of being prosecuted for perjury—a felony—he was allowed, in return for his cooperation with the prosecution, to plead guilty to the misdemeanour of failing to answer "accurately and fully".

He faces a minimum sentence

answer "accurately and fully".

He faces a minimum sentence of one month in prison. But the judge could suspend it, and no date for sentencing has been set.

This leniency has caused wide-spread adverse comment to the effect that the big fish are getting away with it while the small fry suffer. Mr Dwight Chapin, the admittedly unrepentant and uncooperative former presidential appointments secretary, got a minimum of 10 tary, got a minimum of 10 months for perjury.

Mr Jaworski's spokesman refused to comment about the reasons for Mr Connolly's resignation, but announced yesterday that Mr Connolly's two assistants had also resigned. The spokes man said they gave no reasons

All this is out of character for the tightly knit and up to now spiritedly loyal staff which in spite of Professor Cox's dismissal by the President last October—had stayed to a man with Mr Jaworski.

There are 36 lawyers in a staff of 79, and Mr Jaworski has recently been publicly praising their youth, dedication and mature assumption of awesome responsibilities. Today there is tension apparent among the staff.

But Mr Jaworski is very ough. He has no truck with White House nonsense, as he has shown. And if—as has been suggested—some of the staff had tried holding their resignations as a pistol to his head, it would be entirely in character for him to have called their bluff.

Communist Party attempts to rekindle revolutionary spirit in a materialistic petty-bourgeois society

Uphill fight to win over Hungary's youth

By Gabriel Ronsy

Since the removal of the fathers" of the economic reform programme from key positions in Hungary's recent leadership reshuffle the ideologically loaded relationship between prosperity and revolu-tionary spirit has become the central issue in every officially sponsored discussion.

The entire mass media, down to the smallest provincial daily, has dutifully reexamined for the umpteenth time the problem bat has bedevilled the communist system: the choice between material possessions and revolutionary spirit.

In the bad old days of Rako sa's Stalinist terror, the marked lack of revolutionary spirit among the masses, amounting to a downright hatred of communism and all its works, was explained by the few who cared with the maxim: "You cannot sing revolutionary hymns on an empty stomach."

The exploding popular anger of 1956 drove this point home. Janos Kadar's "goulash-commuhism "set about to put it right.
The increasing plenty, the abundance of material goods, has not led, however, to revolutionary hymn singing.

According to the party apparatchiks, "petry-bourgeois mentality" has taken the place of revolutionary zeal and money-grabbing has replaced public spirited interest in social justice and economic equality.

The party newspaper Nepsza-badsag put it this way: "If Hungary's (growing) wealth-

The meetings and discussions have been conducted amid a high-powered press campaign aimed at reawakening interest in the country's "revolutionary traditions". Not surprisingly, perdaps, the discussions simply confirmed the obvious; it was easy to be a revolutionary in 1848 in the fight against Hapsburg absolutism, or in 1919 against the grinding poverty brought about by a lost war. The great majority of today's youth identified the nineteenth the true revolutionaries and some extended this to those who had fought with weapon in hand for freedom in the first half of this century. But the idea that those who work for the common good taking on additional burdens, and accepting serious sacrifices, are the true revolutionaries of today, did not seem to capture the participants' imagination.

The new course, beraided by the leadership changes, promises to be an uphill struggle for the Kadar regime if the conclusions provided by the Pest county youth meetings are any-

Japan's severe penal code plan denounced

A new attempt by the Japanese Government to introduce draconian measures into Japan's penal code caused a national protest today. The press and other critics claimed that the proposals, based on a prewar plan, would corrode democratic rights and stir up nationalism.

Any manufacturer who ignores this shouldn't be in business.

The time has come when no manufacturer can afford to overlook Northern Ireland.

At a time of high energy costs, increasing industrial unrest and scarce capital, the good news about Northern Ireland will come as a breath of fresh air to depressed businessmen.

A recent independent survey.

In January of this year an independent financial analyst carried out a survey on eight international companies who had factories or manufacturing bases in Northern Ireland.

The purpose of the exercise was to compare operating costs in Northern Ireland with operating costs in the firms' countries of origin.

In each case the Northern Ireland subsidiary came out on top, largely through the productivity of the workforce and because of the industrial development incentives offered by the Department of Commerce.

Cheap capital.

As every businessman knows, capital is hard to come by.

In certain cases, companies setting up in Northern Ireland can qualify for assistance to the order of two-thirds of the total investment required and, in very special circumstances, the level of Government assistance can be even higher.

If you find capital elsewhere, an interest relief grant can be arranged.

Lowrents.

It is possible for a new company coming to Northern Ireland to move into a brand new tactory.

Some factories are let at annual rents as low as 90p a square metre, the lowest rents available in the EEC.

New building grants.

Should you wish to build your own factory, we can provide a maximum grant of 40% which,

taking full account of the tax concessions available, could mean that we're paying for 63% of your initial costs.

We pay for training.

Some businessmen have said that we have the best Government training facilities in Europe.

We have a system of Government training centres and no part of the Province is more than 25 miles from one of these centres.

Should you decide to come, we can train a skilled workforce in advance.

We believe that the State should shoulder the burden of training costs for new industry, not you.

If you set up in an area of high male unemployment, we can provide further substantial help towards starting up costs.

Grants and tax relief on machinery and equipment.

On new machinery and equipment we provide a maximum grant of 40% which, again taking full account of the tax concessions available, could mean that we would be footing the bill for 73% of your initial costs.

Good industrial relations.

Less than 4% of all workers engaged in all kinds of industrial activity were involved in any form of industrial dispute during 1973.

Their attitude is reflected in our productivity figures: In the past ten years, Northern Ireland's output has grown twice as fast as that of the United Kingdom as a whole.

13 manufacturing companies.

During 1973, another 13 manufacturing companies decided on new investment in Northern Ireland.

If all this has set you thinking, write to us. One thing we can guarantee should you decide to invest in Northern Ireland.

You'll spend less time worrying about money and more time going about your business.

the sense of seclusion given by such a feature. Pully-moated properties are comparatively rare in the market, but partially-moated houses are much commoner. Moreover, the remains of the moat usually provide an attractive water feature and often offer possibilities for fishing and boating almost at one's door.

Such a property is Otley Hall, near Ipswich, a Indor house with a moat around three sides stocked with freshwater fish. The house is good of its

The concentration with which the film critic is obliged to see his films—two or three in a day instead of a same once a week, once a month or once in a blue moon—probably gives him a view in some way approximating to the foreshortened perspective of history. And history, in so far as it will judge from the films that people saw in the 1970s, may well have the critic's rather dispiriting view of a generation which more than any before it seems obsessed with violent organized crime and no less violent retribution. Popular entertainment, and the cinema in particular, has always grati-fied its audiences with crime and violence; before the Western, the horror and the gangster movie there was The Police Gazette and the bloodand-thunder drama. But the regular movie-goer and the force-fed critic might be forgiven for thinking that never before has the concentration been so complete, or man's existence been so exclusively symbolised, in his movie image, by the gun and the hurtling automobile as instruments of death.

This week, indeed, Hollywood offers us nothing else. Dillinger comes from a fruitful collaboration between American International Pictures, who have made a speciality of low-budget violence, and John Milius, the 30-year-old writer of Jeremiah Johnson and The Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean, who now makes his debut as writer-

The real-life Dillinger was exceptional among the legendary gangsters in that he did not come from the usual Catholicimmigrant background, but was an American-born Protestant; and did not concentrate his bank-robbing activities in the usual urban centres, but was in-clined to roam the rural midwest. A large part of his selves, pistols and Thompsons, ripping boles through the first being ripping boles through the first celebrity was due to his being one of the first fugitives—along with Baby-face Nelson and Pretty Boy Floyd—to be gunned down by the FBI in 1934, under selves, pistols and Thompsons, ripping holes through the bodies of men who leap in paroxysmic death dances. It is an aspect upon which Milius dwells with rather too much delight; but

Oates as a laconically amiable Robin Hood (a distinct roman-ticization of the character, even allowing for the odious role in which the Depression had cast the bankers and big corporations in the early Thirties); and his exploits are reconstructed in a casual episodic form, with time-and-place title links. In my recent article about "The Bingo Takeover" I find that a couple of rather significant paragraphs were inadver-tently omitted, which in fact rather obscured the point of the argument. The point about my remark that "Even if the cinema must die like this, it seems oddly callous to put the hammer that drives the coffin nails into the hands of the audience itself" referred in fact to the way in which support for the Bingo licence application had been produced in court. A follow-up letter to those who accepted the offer said that Ranks' representative would call on the prospective witnesses in their homes, or meet them half an hour before the hearing. Rank are, of course, quite legally entitled to canvass support for their cause in this way. It does not alter the blow to the British cinema when an organization

The fourth of Sir John Vanbrugh's six plays, written in 1705, centres on two scriveners' efforts at wife swapping and the loss of a diamond necklace. Its sub plot concerns a young and fair couple initially drawn together by the power of love but held together by the promise of financial security.

The conventional plot contains a tired version of Milla-mant's terms of marriage; it is nor distinguished by a character of the dimensions of Vanbrugh's earlier Sir John Brute or his Lord Foppington, Perhaps, since beginning Castle Howard, the author was too concerned with architectural construction. architectural construction to follow through the logic of a dramatic structure. hands she becomes a puppet. It is perhaps for these reasons that the play has been somewhat neglected. Yet it has vitality, and it abounds in elegant, well characterized lines; Clarissa, bored with her marriage, says of her situation: "The want of a thing is perplexing enough, but the possession of it is intolerable".

Alas, Wendy Toye's Chichester production does nothing to reinstate the play. The action is supposed to take place in and around Covent Garden and at the homes of Clarissa and-Mrs Amlet. Anthony Powell has set Amiel Annony Power has set it in what seems a stable with a flight of steps down which characters make long entrances in which dialogue gives way to coy dumb show accompanied by music from Joe Griffiths that sounds as if it had been intended for Son of Zorba.

All the interweaving com-plexities could have been avoided by casting someone else as the fading comedian; but then we should have been left with very little indeed, since the fading comedian is by now a cliche of British sentimental drama. As it was, we had a curi-ous situation of actor as auto-

Is he perferming a convincing lie which is what drama is, or embodying a truth, which is what life is? Nor were these mere academic specula-tions, because Arthur English was very good indeed, and it really is important to know why he was very good, since I would like to see more of him (I have always, ever since he was little more than a jubbering tie, wanted to see more of him), and I am anxious to know how much of him is actor.

Certainly, his reconstruction, if we can call it that for the moment, worked marvellously moment, worked marvellonsly with Gwen Nelson's splendid vignette of the yearning spinster: their conjoining of gentility and vulgarity was perfect in this sub-Eastbourne setting, their mirrored needs were beautifully set down, their inevitable alienation deftly set up. When these two lost souls meshed upon the screen it was meshed upon the screen, it was impossible not to be captivated by them, so that whatever it was that Arthur English was doing he was doing it very well I very much hope he can do

Adriana Lecouvreur Festival Hall

There is always an excuse for a concert performance of an opera not generally in the repertory. Cilea's Adriana Leconoreur is to be seen as well as heard in Italy and the United States, and elsewhere sometimes (it turned up at an Edinburgh Festival not long ago with Magda Olivero in the name-part), and it has been recorded too. The chief justification for Wednesday's concert performance on South Bank was the presence in London (making records) of Montserrat Caballé, the latest soprano to make this splendidly dramatic role her own. She has not, of course, sung Adriana here because it is not in British repertory, though the music is luscious para-Puccini (too strong to be called pseudo), and might well delight devotees of Tosca. Edrich is logical choice after his trial century

Cricket Correspondent WORCESTER: England, with all second innings wickers in hand, sad the Rest by 39 runs. He provided the answer by naking 106 our of the Rest's score of 267 for eight declared.

It was, in ever, way, the innings hat he might have played, in the same conditions, when he was a much heavier scorer than he has been for the last couple of years. Hardly a cloud tarnished the sky; the pitch was true and easy-paced; the bowling, except for Greig in his new style, was old hat to Edrich, if the selectors are logical, or unless Lloyd does something quite extra-Lloyd does something quite extra-ordinary today, Edrich may expect to be in the England side for the first Test match against India, which will be announced this afternoon. That is the next stage of his come-back. It will present problems of spin that were not there yesterday, perhaps of temperament, too. If Edrich is successful against India, which he was not in his last series against them (180 runs in six com-pleted innings), he will be well on the way to Australia for a third time. There was a time when one could have slept through an Edrich hundred and still given an accurate description of it. I espected now motice a difference here, a change there; but there was none. Seeing him so secure and unconcerued it was hard to understand why he got only two small hundreds in the whole of last season. Yesterday was the 85th of his career. The 85th was ar Durban, last December, for D. H. Robins's XI against a representative South African side.

Other than Edrich, only Lewis, of the Rest batsmen, did himself any good. His innings of 52, was a reminder of how attractively he can play. Two or three of his cover drives were the purest strokes of the day, models for the many children on the ground to follow and all the better for being seen to travel across such lovely turf. It was a pity he was out before having a chance to show his form against the new ball. Lewis was impressed by new ball. Lewis was impressed by the bounce which Greig gets with his off breaks, wishing I dare say, that he had discovered it in India

Knott's place was taken by the Worcestershire wickerkeeper. Cass; but the injury is unlikely to let Taylor into the England side at Old Trafford next week.

Surrey recover poise in their second innings

By Alan Gibson

THE OVAL: Surrey, with five second innings wickets in hand, are 13 runs behind the Indians. Surrey began the day at 17 for one, and were all out just before luncheon for 85. This was not in itself, surprising, given the weak-ened Surrey side and the dusty ened Surrey side and the dusty pitch. The surprise was that the demon bowler was Abid Ali. The Indian spin bowlers, I am sure, were anxious to get to work, but Abid Ali bowled Howarth with the day's first ball, and went on taking wickets with such regularity that he could hardly be taken off. His figures, six for 23. must have configures, six for 25, must have con-firmed his place in the Test team. Madan Lal, who was on at the other end for most of the time, was less accurate and less lucky. The bounce was uncertain at both ends, but bowling from the Vauxhall end would sometimes produce a carcely playable squatter.

Thus Bedi and Venkataraghavan, who had looked so dangerous in their single over apiece on the previous evening, had no more bowling in the innings. Chaudrasekhar, who quietly plucked rwo feathers of the tail, was the only spinner to bowl.

But the Indian spin bowlers had to work harder in the afternoon; to work nature in the abstraction; not that the pitch became any better, but Surrey batted with much more application and courage, taking their bats to the ball when they had a chance, and the luck ran the other way. Forty runs had been scored when Edwards was out after his second Edwards was out, after his second Edwards was out, after his second brave innings in the match. Bedi beat him both in turn and in flight, and he departed with a rueful shake of the head, like a dog emerging from the water with a mixture of regret and relief. I was glad to see Edwards playing well, in his benefit year. He has done good service for Surrey, and brought a thoughtful and witty mind to the game.

Howarth was caught at deep square leg by Viswanath, really one of the best catches I have ever seen. He dived forward and caught seen. He diven forward and caught the ball by his chin, only inches from the ground. Skinner played a mixture of graceful and clumsy strokes, that had earned him 42 runs by the time he was leg before to Venkataraghavan.

That was 89 for three, at a quarter to four, and we were beginning to think in terms of a two-day fimish, but the fourth-wicket stand between Roope and Owen-Thomas put on 56, and although Jackman did not stay long, Intikhab belted around at the spinners as though he had never heard of them before. Roope's innings will be useful ammunition to him next time anybody says he cannot play spin bowling. Undoubtedly, he played a lot of it with the outlying portions of his bat, but he kept his head down in

The Indian fielding, so good earlier, became ragged as the day approached its end. Two chances and perhaps three half chances went down, and there were some foolish overthrows. Even the Punjabi poise of Bedi, who certainly did not have much luck, was occasionally disturbed. The Indians ought still to win this march but ought still to win this match, but they did let things slip yesterday in a way one does not expect from a touring team with the prospect of a day off.

Worcestershire wilt to last pair in the Parks

By Peter Marson OXFORD: Worcestershire, with nine second innings wickets in hand, lead Oxford University by 121 runs.

To complement another lovely summer's day in the parks yesterday, we had one of those splendid occasions when the last wicket pair thrash about them to the immense thrash about them to the immense delight of everyone except, of course, the fielding side. Not that thrash properly describes two fine innings by Thackeray, who made 65 not out, and the last man, Fursdon, who made 55. But the effect was the same. Their partnership enabled Oxford to get within 51 runs of Worcestershire's 325 for four declared.

Thackeray's innings was his best, and so was Fursdon's and together against the old ball, the new one and Worcestershire's bowlers fast and slow they put on 95 runs in a thoroughly entertaining partner-ship lasting 85 minutes. Before the close Worcestershire made 70 for the loss of Parker.

Oxford began the day at 32 for the loss of Docwra's wicket on Wednesday evening. A cynical view of the situation was that the University needed 144 runs to sidestep Hemsley's invitation to follow on. Indeed, after Worcestershire had separated Mitra and Fisher and wickets had begun to tumble. Oxford were in danger of being asked to bat again. When the seventh wicket fell at 114 it looked

Nonentities should not be put up as title challengers

By Neil Allen Boxing Correspondent

The European Boxing Union should "have a serious rethink" about the swiftness with which it produces challengers for its continuental championships. That is the view of Mr Ray Clarke, secretary of the British Boxing Board of Control, following the wearisome heavyweight contest in Copenhagen on Wednesday in which Joe Bugner, of Britain, forced Mario Baruzzi from Italy into retirement after nine rounds.

Mr Clarke said afterwards:

"This bout was far below championship standard, and the EBU really cannot have much of a case for putting up someone like Baruzzi 23 a genuine contender."

The experienced Austrian referee, the experienced Austrian referee, Baruzzi as a genuine contender.
The experienced Austrian referee, Kurr Rado, was meanwhile saying that ir was one of the worst bouts
he had ever refereed. The logical

step for Mr Clarke, now that Britain is in the powerful position of having six religning European champlons, is to persuade his officers that the EBU should be restrained from producing puglistic nonentities as challengers.

The Copenhagen bout was a compulsory defence of Eugner's European title but the mauling, the wrestling, and the inadequacies of Bugner, as well as the overweight Baruzzi, must have made most spectators, including millions of BEC television viewers, wish that it had never taken place. Independent television, who paid about $7,000 for their recording of two European champlonships in Paris earlier in the week, got and gave infinitely better value than the BEC, who probably paid more than $10,000.

In Copenhagen Bugner talked briefly of meeting the winner of the forthcoming New York heavy-weight bout between Joe Frazier and Jerry Quarry. Ironically I believe that, win or lose, Bugner would give a far more whole-hearted showing against one of those two Americans because they would bring the best out of him. The World Boxing Council ranked Bugner fifth among the world's heavyweight contenders for the championship held by George Foreman. Other British boxers mentioned in the rankings were John Conteb, first contender at light heavyweight, and Kevin Finnegan and John Stracey, both rated third in, respectively, the middleweight and welterweight divisions.

World Cup tickets getting scarce

Frankfurt, May 30.—Tickets for the World Cup football championships from June 13 to July? are getting scarce, the organizers reported today. As was generally expected, the opening match between Brazil and Yugoslavia in Frankfurt, the final in Munich, the encounter of West and East Germany on June 22 in Hamburg, and the match for third position on July 6, in Munich, were sold out early.

There were only 500 standing room tickets left for the match on June 18, between Scotland and room tickets left for the match on June 18, between Scotland and Brazil in Frankfurt, the organizers added. They considered "a pleasant aspect" of things to come, the fact that even the one-sided encounter between Italy and Haiti in Munich on June 15 sold 40,000 tickets of an available 74,000 by the end of May,

The organizers advised those interested to buy tickets within the next two weeks; for, as they said, experience shows that little choice remains when demand reaches its remains when demand reaches its peak at the stadium ticket offices.— Associated Press.

Kodes is disqualified from Italian event after pushing linesman

ويدا من العرص

Rome, May 30.—Jan Kodes, the Wimbledon champion, was disqualified from the Italian open tennis championship yesterday for pushing a linesman in his match against Antonio Zugarelli, of Italy.

Kodes was two points from defeat when one of his shots was called in by the umpire, Guiseppe Buonamo, but out by the linesman, Alcide Rappi.

Kodes ran towards Rappi and argued with him. He then grabbed and shook him, As the crowd booed and kodes walked off the court, the championship referee, Michele Brunetti, said Kodes was disqualtified from the tournament.

Zugarelli had won the first set 7—6, Kodes the second 6—3 and in the decisive third the Czech was losing 5—4. Rappi's call left Zugarelli on match point.

In the women's singles Christine Evert, of the United States, came from behind to beat Marie Neumannova, of Czechoslovakia, 4—6, 6—1, 6—4, to move into the quarter-final round.

Miss Barker's accuracy wins the day

Susan Barker, of Palguton, Britain's under 18 teams champion
on grass and clay, will play Lesley Charles, five places above her in the national rankings, in today's semi-final round of the Surrey grass court championships, sponsored by Rothmans, at Surbiton.
Another of Britain's ranked players, Susan Mappin, opposes the top seed, Patti Hogan, of California. None lost a set yesterday though Miss Barker came within two points of doing so when serving at 4—5 against Carrie Meyer.
These athletic trenagers had the closest women's match of a sunny afternoon marred by a blustery, teasing cross-wind. Miss Meyer was the more tidily flexible. But the outcome clearly depended on the accuracy with which Miss Barker played her more punishing shots. At the heart of the match
Miss Barker lost only five points in advancing from 5—6 down in the first set to 2—0 up in the second (she had two break points for 3—0). That affected the confidence of both players. The only remaining crisis came when Miss Meyer had three break points for 4—4. But Miss Barker took that game with a forehand winner, one of her most effective shots, and then broke service for the match with an equally characteristic backhand drop.

Miss Charles lost only four points in an astonishing first set with Paulina Peisachov, who must have been disconcerted by the stream of winners flowing from Miss Charles's racket. The Israell, less experienced on grass, lost eight games before coming to terms with her timing and restoring some sort of order. But she could still make no impression on Miss Charles's service.

Kafe Latham was neither powerful enough nor consistent enough to maintain pressure on Miss Mappin, who had the chance to play stracking shots and hit them with such assurance, versatility and precision that the Californian never had a chance. Predictably, Miss Hogan had too much skill and experience for Christine O'Neill, a promising newconer to the circuit. promising newcomer to the circuit.

Christ Church continued to stamp their authority at the head of Divi-sion I yesterday, the second day of the Oxford Summer Eights. Four the Oxford Summer Eights. Four crews advanced in the first division —Magdalen. St Edmund Hall, Lincoln. and St John's at the expense of Keble, Worcester, Jesus and Queen's. Wadham gave a spirited performance, saving their skius with a late rally after University College had closed to within half a length.

Main interest in Division I today centres on Magdalen in pursuit of Balliol: University College's second stab at Wadham, with Keble threatened, and Lincoln, in spite of the absence of the Blue, Marsden, in line for their third succession.

But for a long time now our Derby winners have been singularly uncuressint in themselves siring the winner of the very race that endeared them; to breeders.

Administly in recent years we have seen the American influence creeping in, just as in the postwar years krench blood was in the ascendarity. It is still a fact, though, that since 1945 only one Derby winner, Never Say Die, has succeeded in string the winner of the great Epson classic, and even his achievement became a little less glamorous when one realized that ins achievement recained in the less glamorous when one realized that his saccessful son was Lurkspur. Larkspur won the race in which seven of his rivals inclinding the favourite, Hethersett, either fell or were brought down. The pattern is unlikely to change this year unless a rank outsider wins next Wednes-day.

Of those currently quoted in all the published ante-post hooks, only Imperial Prince (50-1). Live Arrow (100-1), Majesty (200-1), and Sound Jiff (250-1) are by horses who won the Derby. Imperial Prince and Majesty are both by Sir Ivor. Live Arrow and Sound Jiff by Never Say Die.

It is a good moment, then, to passing interest in what goes on have a look at the breeding of those who seem destined to play the leading roles on Wednesday. It is fair, I think, to say that those but, if judged on what we have

Violence that could wreck the West from within

As Ulster struggles back into its hair shirt, a new book out today şays all Britain should prepare for its worst period of domestic violence for more than 50 years. Except in Northern Ireland the police have not had to call for military assistance since the general strike, and the last rioter to be killed by the Army in Britain was on the streets of Liverpool in 1919. But these halcyon days are drawing to a close. Brigadier Frank Kitson who argued in "Low Intensity Operations " that most Army operations in the late 1970s would involve IRA type campaigns was "probably right." The relationship between the police and Army should be urgently reexamined before we are enmeshed in a pattern of violence and conflict such as the country has not experienced since the years immediately preceding the First World War. These anyway are among the conclusions drawn either in, or from Crisis in European Detence which, as its title suggests.

is concerned with a wider spectrum of horrors than urban guerilla warfare in Britain. Its authors, Mr Geoffrey Lee Williams, senior lecturer in international relations at Portsmouth Polytechnic, and Mr Alen Lee Williams MP. Director of the British Atlantic Committee and a former parliamentary private secretary to Denis Healey, classify three kinds of threat to the stability of Europe during the next ten years.

One involves the Soviet Union. But deliberate Russian aggression against the West in un-likely. The least unlikely form it could take would be a large-scale attack by 25 divisions, backed up by 50 more. But however seriously this possibility must be covered by contingency blanning in the West, the chances of its happening are More likely is any one of a variety of possible inter-state conflicts, such as for instance, Greece versus Turkey over Eyprus or rights in the Aegean. Austria versus Italy over Tirol or Spain and Britain over Gibraltar. Further east the potential exists for clashes between Romania and Hungary. Romania and the Soviet Union, or Bulgaria and Yugoslavia. Meanwhile the advancing years of those differing supremos Tito and Franco, make Yugoslavia and Spain focal points for

But the most likely threat to urbane European life should come from this growth of domes-ic violence which could have far reaching implications for the security forces. The Army will have to support the police who on their own are ill-equipped to deal with urban violence on the grand scale. But this will mean that the Army will have to acquire a good grasp of psycho-logical methods so that it can gain the sympathy of the population—an essential prerequisite in the sympathy of the popufor any political victory over the terrorists. There might also be at case for recruiting a new spe-cial kind of constabulary, per-haps on the lines of the old wartime reserve.

! Soldiers meanwhile should be recruited with only one eye on the traditional military virtues such as courage, obedience and discipline, and the other on more subtle attributes like tact-fulness, patience, tolerance, and political awareness. Army selecnon boards should place less emphasis on finding "officer-type" candidates and more on detect ing those with understanding of public relations. Similarly an in-crease in the number of graduates among senior police officers might help, and policemen should be recruited not only for their fitness, perserverance and bravery, but for their understanding of human values, their appreciation of civil liber ties and minority rights.

The errors of the past will be repeated, warn the Williams brothers, unless it is realized that the strength of the Army lies not in its firepower but in its capacity to carry through a sustained "counter-insurgency campaign". It must be given the right to close roads, search houses and put up road blocksalthough the rights must be exercised with restraint, under officers who understand the limits of their authority. (Actually if they do not already after Northern Ireland, where there are plenty of people to remind them, they never will.) This, they add, is not a prescription for military rule—but just a means of giving the politicians time to think and introduce their poli-tical remedies. Military defeat of the urban guerrilla is an illu sion. True victory can only be

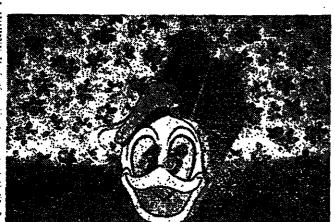

Crisis in European Defence lists three other requirements for political victory over the insurgents, which it says, have been made apparent by Northern Ireland, One, the military should be allowed to run a sustained military campaign against defined objectives. Two, local civil authorities should be made subordinate to the military commander who should be directly responsible to a "minister for counter-insurgency". Three, not only should drastic social reform be implemented where appropriate but the authorities should be made to negotiate with the insurgents when the latter show interest in a political solution. Toere are many in the armed forces who would agree with this prognosis for the next 10 years. Increased attention has been paid over the last year or two to future patterns of cooperation between the military and the police. Civil-military relations is a frequent topic for discussion on defence courses, and officers cast uneasy glances at hints of latent violence among student groups and politically disaffected minorities, although es for the future are for the most part no more

If such fears prove to be wellfounded, however, there would infinite implications for Nato which, say the Williams brothers, is already at "the crossroads"—albeit a term crossroads"—albeit a term which could be used to describe almost any organization at any time. If the stability of the Western alliance were suddenly threatened by internal trouble in say, West Germany, Holland or Denmark, would the authori ties there feel justified in callfor help? One doubts it, but it is another question for Nato to think about.

Who really control the radio waves —and for what?

The ether is man's birthright, as free as the air he breathes. Or is it? Actually, the radio spectrum is ruthlessly patrolled by governments and international agencies. Amateurs and citizens are restricted to just a few limited bands. And the Post Office is as much a military contractor as a manager of public telecommunications and broadcasting services.

The right to speak to every person in the land is jealously guarded, disguised in peacetime by the Jimmy Young or Emperor Roscoe shows. But, given a political crisis, it could quickly turn into a powerful tool of official persuasion.

In the case of nuclear war or revolution, the BBC would use its elaborate arrangement of transmitters linked by protected landlines to the government's underground emergency headquarters at Evesham - so it could always keep control of the air waves.

The Nixon-haters who are trying to push a landslide back up the mountain

In his report of the crushing defeat in the Arkansas Democratic primary of Senator Fulbright, The Times Washington correspondent, reviewing the campaign there, included a fascinating vignente. Senator Fulbright was reported as saving of his opponent's overwhelmas saying of his opponent's overwhelming margin of victory that it was "a tremendous surprise". Then:

Only last Sunday, he said on national television—unwisely, his senior assistants felt—that his polls indicated he was "four-tenths of one per cent ahead". His assistants later admitted they had no polls.

No polls! Imagine: no polls! Here a poll, there a poll, all God's chillun got polls, but poor Senator Fulbright had no noils at all i

But in that case, how did he come to say on national television (unwisely, his senior assistants felt) that his polls indicated that he was four-tenths of one per cent ahead? The fact is, I regret to say, that Senator Fulbright was a politician seeking re-election who, when circumstances suggested that it might be electorally advantageous to report the findings of a poll purting him just ahead of the rival candidate, reported such findings despite the fact that they were, whether he knew it or not fictitious.

Never mind, for the moment, what Nanny used to say about where people who say things that aren't true don't go when they die; what does the pack that has for so long been hunting President Nixon and all his men say? Do they, one and all, declare that it is just as well that the Contract Evilbedth has lost his that Senator Fulbright has lost his Senate seat, as it would otherwise be necessary for him to be expelled (unless, of course, he would do the decent thing and resign)? Do they insist that nothing else could be expected from a man who for 30 years has courted, and accepted electoral help from, some of the vilest bigots in the United States, casting his stage of the American Negro's slow an painful advance? Do they remind the world of his appalling remark that it didn't matter a damn to a Vietnamese hill-farmer what sort of a government he lived under, and draw attention to its racialist undertones? Do they dub him "Tricky Billy", insist that they would not buy a second-hand car from him. rejoice at the humiliation of his electoral rout, declare that although politics is a rough, tough business, the use of spurious evidence is far, far outside the area in which morally dubious practices can be excused in the pursuit of power

I have said before, am about to say now, and will no doubt say again, that President Nixon may be guilty of all the crimes and misdemeanours attributed to him, and even some (such as eating biscuits in bed) which he has not yet been charged with; or he may be en-tirely innocent of everything alleged; or he may be guilty on some charges and not guilty on others; or not guilty on others and guilty on some. Of one offence, however, there can be no doubt whatever that he is unquestionably, and indefensibly, guilty, and that is having on or about the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1972, beaten Mr George McGovern in the Presiden-tial election by one of the biggest popular margins in the entire history or the Republic.

Here, we must avoid falling into the heffalumptrap of either/or. A great deal of the demunciation of President Nixon has come from people convinced of his guilt in the matter of Watergate, or who feel that his conduct in office, whether it has included crimes or violations of the Constitution or not, has folia below the minimum standard acceptable in an American President. And either or both of these beliefs may be well-founded, and President Nixon therefore unworthy of his high responsibility and unfit to continue to discharge it.

But a good deal, also, of the implacable fervour with which he is being pursued, and which contrasts so sharply with the attitude adopted by the pursuers to similar actions alleged against, or admitted by, those whom they favour generally—as they disfavour President Nixon generally—is based on their deep sense of affirm that, given the choice between their chosen standard-bearer and Mr Nixon, the American deep sense of affirm that, given the choice between their chosen standard-bearer and Mr Nixon, the American deep sense of the dard-bearer and Mr Nixon, the American people overwhelmingly chose Mr Nixon. To reverse that crushing rejection of their own beliefs is what many of those so eagerly sounding their horns in the Nixon-humt seek, consciously or unconsciously. This fact, as I say, does not exclude other, nobler motives, either among the pack in general or indeed in individual hunters. But unless the fact is general as a constant. fact is grasped, a great deal of recent American history becomes unintel

The rot started with President Kennedy. He was claimed by the liberal establishment of America as one of them, indeed as their personal possession. I believe that this attitude was based on a misunderstanding of his political character, but that is not the point; the point is that "we" most profoundly felt that "one of us." had at last become President of the United

Then came the tragedy of Dallas, and the accession of Lyndon Johnson. It is fashionable now, among the intellectu-ally fashionable folk, to believe that the ally fashionable folk, to believe that the hatred of Johnson stemmed from his gradually deeper enumerdement in the Vietnam War. It did not; it long antedated it. It began on the day of the assassination, when they realized, to their fury and dismay, that the new President, whatever he was, was emphatically not one of them, and it deepened when, after his landslide victory over Senator Goldwater in 1964, he succeeded in pushing through the liberal legislation which Kennedy, blocked by a hostile Congress, had been unable to enact. (It was most instructive unable to enact. (It was most instructive to watch how, when Johnson began to prove successful, they began to gather round his Vice-President, Humphrey, to save themselves from the pain of admiring the uncouth Texan.) In Mr William Manchester's book about the assassination of John Kennedy, Death of a President, there is Kennedy, Death of a President, there is a tiny spotlit scene that sums up what I am talking about. In the aeroplane taking Johnson and Mrs Kennedy back to Washington with the body of the slain hero, one of the press secretaries referred to Johnson, quite correctly, as "the President". General McHugh, Kennedy's Air Porce aide, returted: "I have only one President, and he's lying back in that cabin." The remark so pleased Kenneth O'Donnell, one of Kennedy's political advisers, that he responded thus to McHugh.

"This morning you were this tall", he said, holding his hand a few inches from the floor. Then he raised it as high as he could reach and said: "Now you're up here."

But McHugh and O'Donnell had been very close to Kennedy, and were still numb from the horror of the previous hour; their reaction was understandable. The subsequent, much wider refusal to admit that Johnson could really be President, that "their" President had been snatched from them by an uncaring fate, which affected the liberal intelligentsia generally, was another matter. (Incidentally, when I looked up the details of the episode I have recounted, in order to check my memory of it, in Manchester's book, I came across something hardly less characteris tic, namely Senstor Fulbright's reaction to the news of Kennedy's assassination. He heard it over lunch, and when he did so he leaped to his feet. "Goddann is!" he shouled. "I told him not to go to Dallas ["]

to Dellas (")

When Humphrey palled, and it began to look possible that Robert Kennedy might challenge Johnson, politicopsychological allegiance was instantly transferred to him, and when he, too, was struck down by an assassin, in the middle of the Presidential primary campaign, and Senator McGovern saw his chance, there was a last minute rallying to him, as the closest available approximation to "one of us". The 1972 triumph, in the fight for the Democratic nomination, of McGovern (probably the most absurdly inadequate potential President since Harding, but (probably the most absurdly inadequate potential President since Harding, but by the mercy of Providence and the good sense of the American electorate not similarly elevated to being an actual one) was the apotheosis of the entire Liberal establishment's dream: the picking of an absolutely certain loser to fight the hated usurper. Nixon, the man whom " was " had abolished in 1960, and whom "we" had abolished in 1960, and again in 1962, but who neverticless, by some hideous miscalculation, was actually sitting in the White House, and proposing to sit there for four years

His proposal was endorsed by the voters with a landslide of almost un-precedented dimensions; and it is to precedenced dimensions; and it is to shove that landshide back up the mountain that so many of the hunters of President Nixon yearn, whether they realize it or not. The voters chose Nixon: so much the worse for the voters, for "we" chose McGovern, and when we ope our lips, let no dog bark.

We chose Fulbright, too, for he was against Nixon; indeed, absolutely anybody who is against Nixon, or whom Nixon is against may now confidently expect canonization (at a news conference other other day, Alger Hiss, so help me, was received with acclamation, and I have no doubt that if they had thought Benedict Arnold had been a Nixon-hater they would have applicated him too). And because Fulbright was against Nixon, and for that matter against Nixon, and for that matter against Lyndon Johnson, his use, for electoral purposes, of a fictious opinion poll excites no indignation, he rage, no comment even, on the part of those for whom similar behaviour alleged against President Nixon is enough to hang him high.

Once more, with feeling: President Nixon may be guilty of high crames and misdemeanours, and if he has been he is unfit to hold his office and should leave it or be removed from it. And now, to those who share that opinion, a question: just what do you think, and feel, and say, about Senator Fulbright's use of a non-existent opinion poll?

Why the militant teachers are failing the test ers' action committee is meeting today to decide finally on whether to hold strikes in some schools-but they are unlikely to decide to do so.

Indeed, teacher militancy in the North-East and in London has degenerated into a farce. And with examinations and the setting up of an independent inquiry into teachers pay, the public would probably agree that the season and the reason for teacher militancy is past. The National Union of Teachers held a referendum of its 37,000 London members at the beginning of May. It followed a successful afternoon's walk-out in beautiful sunshine by at least 11,500 of them. The union asked for votes for three kinds of strikes—of one day, up to two weeks, and more than two weeks. The votes were collected on May 8. The result has not been made public, and three weeks later, there are many members on the executive who still do not know what the voting figures were.

It has been a poetic week. After my adventures with the sound poets in Earls Court on Wednesday, I repaired to the Martini

Terrace yesterday to meet par-ticipants in next week's Poetry International '74 at the Institute of Contemporary Arts in the Mall. There must be something symbolic in the difference be-

London.

The sound poets are not much admired by the more conventional kind, who I suppose could be called unsound poets. Charles Osborne, the director of Poerry International, was rather brutal.

"I read your piece this morning about that ragbag down in Earls poet at all.

"Why are you here?" I ssked him. "It's a long story". he began, and fans of My Word on the radio will know what that means. He was there in a pater-nal capacity, since both his son and his daughter are connected with the festival. He revealed in passing that he was making good progress with his forth-was finding it "very amusing".

Next I spoke to Lord Hail-sham, who is a poer and who is sharing a platform with Enoch Powell Tom Driberg and Grey Gowrie at the ICA on Tuesday, envited "The politician as Gowrie at the ICA on Tuesday, entitled "The politician as poet." Hailsham was a poet, but is not any longer. He stopped writing poetry in 1963.

"I just stopped", he explained. "It was the end of that phase of my life. I always thought my translations (from

I understand that in some cases the teachers simply did not understand the questions in the ballot. Quite a significant number of them voted for strikes of more than two weeks. but did not also vote for strikes of up to two weeks. May be they thought they were being asked to choose one of the three,

The leadership is also suffering from a paranoia of publicity. At two meetings its action com-mittee, which was organizing the ballot, were handed lists of voting figures, asked to return them, and then solemnly sworn to secrecy. But a militant left-wing teacher who burst into one of the meetings, armed with a camera, startled the committee until they realized he was not equipped with a flash gun.

instead of votes for all three.

The operation has reached farce proportions because the whole object of the ballot was to persuade the Government to award an interim increase in the strike. But they will not do so, teachers' London allowance by because when it comes to the May 31, the last date for crunch, teachers are too profes-teachers to resign if they want to leave London at the end of the summer term. The union's action committee has prevari cated beyond that date, by its own indecision.

The indications are that about 47 per cent of the mem-bers in inner London voted for strikes of up to two weeks. A much lower proportion of teachers in outer London also voted this way. Lower propor-tions all round voted for strikes of more than two weeks.

The union needs a two-thirds majority of its members in any one school or area before it can call its members out. They did not have this majority in any of its 40-odd Greater London areas, but they did bave it at about 500 schools, mainly in inner London, Brent, Newham and Waltham Forest.

Technically the executive

have managed to blow a rather squalid local dispute about the master into a mammoth row in which they began boycotting examinations all over the region, and threatened the chances of thousands of pupils in their Certificate of Secondary Education (CSE) examinations. Faced with pressure from parents and with between 50 and 200 resignations from their members, they changed the boycott to a threat to hold on to the examination papers which their members had marked. Few can seriously believe that this is not just part of another climb-

Much of the heat has been taken out of student dissatisfaction by the Government's 25 per cent increase in student grants. On the same day as the students ended their picket at troubletorn Essex University, Mr Pren-tice, Secretary of State for Edu-cation and Science, announced the setting up of an independent inquiry into teachers' pay. It will almost certainly recommend big increases before the end of

This comes on top of a £10.8m award to teachers in schools in difficult areas and a promise that London teachers will be able to negotiate substantial in-creases in their allowance after the Pay Board reports in June. No one denies that the teachers deserve more money. But if their unions carry out strikes in the same manner as two of them have been behaving in the past few weeks, they will only bring public ridicule upon them. selves, and send many of their members running into the Professional Association of Tea-chers, a newly formed organization which has 8,000 members and is a safe haven for anti-

In the aftermath of Maalot

Below is an extract from a letter written three days after the massacre at Maalot by Simon Louvish, a young Israeli film director associated with the "far left". He had returned to Israel after completion and first showings of his film To Live in Freedom—Israelis and Palestingus in Israel-Palestine, now showing at the Paris-Pullman. It is a documentary about the Below is an extract from a letter It is a documentary about the history of Jewish colonization in Palestine and its efects on both Palestinian Arab and Israeli Palestinian Arab and Israeli Jewish societies in the present day. Both the film and Mr Louvish himself made a favourable impression on Palestinians who attended discussion meetings in London. . The overall annosphere here is one of apprehensive passivity. People sit and wait for the next pogram. The feeling of helpless-ness affects the right as well as the left—calls for the death penalty do not carry with them any conviction that this will actually change anything.

They are now even consciously seen at a ritual. In fact, there is a bizarre political situation in this country—the right is overall defeatist and offers nothing but further wars and eventual holocaust. The far left (what remains of Siach and Mattpen) is the only one which says; look, it's not so negative, a solution is possible, etc.

The defeatism of the right

The defeatism of the right maintaines its strength as an alternative government. The far left has, on the other hand, had the ground pulled from under its feet by the Maalot massacre, My personal feeling is that Hawanneh (PDFLP) has made according to the little serious blunder. The little I've seen here since I arrived tended to confirm the reactions we got in London at our Hillel House showing—there has been a growing awareness of the Palestinian case among Israelis—not only on the for left. But instead of adopting policies simed at widening the wedge between people and government on this issue, the Palestinian movements have adopted poli-cies which drive the people into nationalistic and chauvinistic positions. For Hawatmeh to send guerrillas to hold schoolkids as hostages and then to proclaim the need for the Socia-Israelis to abandon Zionism is, at the least, political schizo-phrenia and a fateful turning point which puts the efforts of many dissident Israelis many

By making children into targets he activates the most neurotic strains of the Jewish paranois, since a parallel is automatically drawn with the one million children killed by the Nazis, etc. No action is more liable to turn Israelis enmasse to the Massada complex.

(The probable fact that the government here was willing to sacrifice the children is irrelevant to this basic point-When you point a gun at somebody you take on the responsibility for what might happen.)

What has happened since October 1973 is that Israelis October 1973 is that Israelis have changed from a people in an offensive and aggressive position to a people in a defensive position. Options which were open before October are now closed. It is a situation in which small actions by the other side (Arabs or Palestinians) can make a balance between a positive and negative direction. In my opinion a very crucial opportunity to gain support within tunity to gain support within Israel for the Palestinian cause has been muffed....

Sir Hugh Wontner, the much-travelled Lord Mayor of London. returns tonight from a five-day good will visit to Europe which took in Geneva and Baden Baden. Then yesterday there was to have been a performance of Shakespeare. That turned out to be Tartuffe, by Molière, per-formed in German, which Sir Hugh does not speak. Finally the local television station was to have shown a film about the City of London, but a film about the Port of London arrived instead, and they thought it inappropriate and did not streen it. Other events went according to plan. Sir Hugh was presented with a dark pine from the Black Forest, some bottles of the good white wine and a set of places. The Lord Mayor of Baden-Baden received a cut glass sherry decanter, an official resolution on parchment declaring London's love of his city and a set of London prints. Pierre Cardin's new spring col-lection was unveiled in London yesterday. It was a collection of eight-foot marionettes. Four more hydrofoils are due, and they will carry commuters between Westminster and Greenwich.

Undramatic

Paddy Devlin, the SDLP former Minister of Health, has revealed that he resigned 11 days before the power sharing Executive in Northern Ireland collapsed. He exhibited his resignation note at scribbled his resignation note at a meeting with Merlyn Rees, the Secretary of State, at Stormont Castle. He made his decision after Unionist ministers had refused to defer a fine on rent strikers who were protesting against internment.

The full Executive were holding a discussion with Rees on May 17 when Devlin undramatically wrote his resignation, had it sent from the room, typed and returned before the talk ended with Rees apparently unaware of what was going on. The resignation was frozen when the loyalist strike grew worse—a development which broke the Executive anyway.

Once again Dr Kissinger must reportedly unenthusiastic about be congratulated on a remarkable: the agreement, because they feel diplomatic achievement, and that they have made all the concessions. They perhaps do not appreciate how difficult it was to get the Syrians to accept any disengagement agreement at all, > several reasons. In the firstplace, their commitment to the Palestinian cause is much more genuinely and deeply felt. Geo-graphically and historically, as President Assad rather undiplomatically recalled in a speech. three months ago, Palestine (like Lebanon and Transjordan) is a part of the Syrian regionregion which was the cradle of modern Arab nationalism in the late nineteenth century. The Syrians are linked to the Pales tinians by ties of speech, kinship and custom, and Syria is divided from Palestine by no obvious natural frontier comparable tothe Sinai desert.

Security threat

Right from the start, therefore, the Syrians saw the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine as a threat to their own security. With the wisdom of hindsight and the detachment of distance, one may say that they would have better ensured their security by coming to terms with the Jewish state in 1948. Instead they harried it with sporadic artillery fire from their vantage point on the Golan Heights. When in 1967 Israel retaliated by occupying the Heights, the Syrians saw this as proof of Israel's expansionist nature; and this conviction was reinforced when Israel began to populate the Heights with civilian Iewish settlements.

Golan is thus a much more intractable problem than Sinai, from both sides point of view. Sinai is a desert, whose occupation by Israel may be dishonour able for Egypt, and whose military occupation by Egypt may be alarming for Israel. But there is no great emotional obstacle to either side's regarding Israeli occupation of it as temporary.

Golan by contrast is of great emotional importance to both sides. In Syrian hands it is a direct military threat to the Hula valley, and in Israeli hands it is a direct threat to Damascus. Moreover it is fertile, and it is new cultivated and inhabited by Israeli civilians. This gives a permanent character to the Israeli occupation of it which the Israeli occupation of Sinai-or most of Sinai at any rate-does not have.

The settlers do not want to withdraw, and the Israeli Government has repeatedly assured them that they will not have to. These assurances are heard also. in Damascus. They amount to a of Palestinians as representative, declaration of intent to stay in permanent occupation of Syrian territory, irrespective of security considerations. To Syrians this is clearly unacceptable, and that is teur valable have usually had why the Syrians were so insistent sooner or later to overcome on the need to link disengage their distaste for "talking to process was necessary why the Syrians were so insistent cause it was an exceptionally on the need to link disengage-

withdrawal. In the event they have accepted an agreement containing only a clause referring to Security Council Resolution 338, which they know Israel does not interpret as implying total withdrawal. From the Syrian point of view that is a major concession, whether or not the Israelis regard it as such.

The agreement is therefore very significant, but also very fragile, for two reasons. The first is the Syrian refusal to give any commitment about Palestinian terrorist operations from Syrian territory. Disengagement without this commitment was Israel's greatest concession. The American attempt to remedy this by promising "diplomatic support" to Israel in the event of reprisals is, if anything, an encouragement for renewed war rather than a deterrent

But the second, and more fundamental reason is precisely the unresolved question of Golan. It is very hard to see how Mr Rabin's very weak government, with its majority of one in the Knesset, can envisage any further with-drawal in Golan. But nor can the Syrians allow the disengagement lines to become a permanent boundary. If this shows signs of happening, the Syrians are all too likely to denounce the agreement and renew the war, hoping to drag Egypt in after them.

It is therefore vital that matters should not be left as they are. The dynamic of peace which Dr Kissinger has set in motion must be kept up. The next problem on the agenda must be dealt with soon.

Impossible

But which is it? The Israelis would find it easiest to discuss a further withdrawal in Sinai. But politically it would be difficult if not impossible for Egypt to move on that front unless there is also progress elsewhere. A better option would probably be some kind of disengagement agreement with Jordan. Mr Allon, the new Israeli foreign minister, was known to favour this at one time. But it may already be too late, since King Husain shows signs of bowing before Arab pressure and leaving the future of the West Bank to be negotiated by the Palestine Liberation Organisation whose National Council is due to open, at long last, in Cairo tomorrow.

Mr Allon was also one of the first Israeli leaders to acknowledge the existence of a Palestinian entity". There is a growing recognition in Israel that negotiations with the Palestinians will sooner or later be necessary. even if also an understandable reluctance to accept the PLO, which takes responsibility for such outrages as the massacre at Maalot, as their representative. It seems unlikely, however, that any other body would be accepted by more than a minority and an unrepresentative body will hardly serve the turn. In other times and other countries, those who sought an interlocu-

Ulster: the future of the Union

From Vice Admiral Sir Ian McGeoch Sir, I wish that I could share the equanimity with which you contemequantity with which you contemplate the future of the United Kingdom of Great Britain without Northern Ireland (May 29). You evidently believe that Scotland. Wales, or even Cornwall would wish to remain united to an England (as represented by its present leaders) so inept, so feeble and posillanimous.

May I suggest that in reflecting a loss of political will you may be speaking for yourself, rather than Britain? Have you considered that if the sovereignty of the United Kingdom should cease to include any part of Ireland, and hence the territorial seas adjacent to it (which may soon be extended to twelve miles by international agreement) the maritime defence and off-shore resources of the United Kingdom would be critically affected?

As to representatives of the two communities in the province communities in the province agreeing to a constitutional framework. If you are referring to Protestant and Catholic may I respectfully point out that a political ferment is taking place in Northern Ireland, in the course of which secular, rather than sectarian group secular, rather than sectarian groupings, and leaders, are emerging.

The British Government ought not to be too choosy who it talks to: it should propose having a senate, elected every foor years on a scheme to ensure representation of the major interests and regions in the province, with powers equivalent to the House of Lords; it should raise a numerous, well trained non-sectarian and well trained, non-sectarian and unarmed police force; and it should negotiate with Dublin a United Kingdoin-Eire border which can be effectively controlled by the civil power. When all this has been achieved a considerable reduction in the number of British soldiers stationed in Northern Ireland should be possible without risk of anarchy.
Yours faithfully,

IAN McGEOCH, Mansefield, Thornhill, Dumfriesshire.

May 29.

From Mr C. D. Henderson Sir, The article by Mr Francis Pym, Opposition spokesman for NI affairs, in your issue of May 24 is obviously a genuine attempt by someone out-side the Province to see clearly through the complexities of the political situation in this part of the United Kingdom.

Nevertheless, I feel that some com-ments on his assessment of the rea-sons behind the present disagree-ment may be helpful to readers who are not fully conversant with the Unionist standpoint and indeed of interest to both the Government and As Mr Pym says, the declared aim of the Conservatives in 1970 was "to remove the causes of grievance" and "to carry out security measures designed to defeat terrorism.". In general, I believe it is true to say that the Unionist population welcomed the removal of causes of grievance, even in cases where they were not genuine, so that justice would be seen to be done.

They welcomed, too, the prospect of the British government adopting adequate security measures designed to defeat terrorism, but were poalled to see that these measures rather than defeating terrorism, merely sought to contain it, resulting, as the people of the Province well know, in death, injury and destruction on an unprecedented scale.
It is in vain that opinions of politiciens and even of retired Army officers are discounted, the truth remains that the Unionists believe that the Army was not allowed to deal effectively with the terrorists be-not be forgotten in this respect that the dishonourable attempt by Mr Whitelaw secretly to come to an agreement with the IRA dispelled a

Penalties for driving offences The Darlington Conference was in-deed attended by delegates from the Unionist, Labour and Alliance parties alone and it is regrettable that on that occasion both the "loyalists" and SDLP refused to attend. Understanding all were given

From Sir William Addison and Mr J. B. Horsman Sir, On November 19 last you printed a latter about the Road Traffic Bill which has now been reintroduced in the House of Lords by the present Government. We are dismayed that it still proposes to treat more lightly than at present road traffic offences like dangerous driving, driving with excess alcohol, and failing to stop after an accident, which not only flout the law but imperil life and limb. They would cease to be im-prisonable by magistrates' courts though the first two categories would remain imprisonable on indictment. Failing to stop, however, can be tried only summarily and the present power to imprison will disappear.

The apparent disregard of the views expressed in the House of Lords on December 20, 1973 by Lord Gardiner and Baroness Wootton of Abinger must surprise all who know how highly both are respected as opponents of imprisonment except when necessary to protect society. They argued forcibly that such offences were indeed a danger to the community and should be recognized

If the Bill is passed in its present form people will be invited to con-clude that the consequences of dangerous or "excess alcohol" driving are now regarded as less serious than they used to be. We can-not believe that the public is as complacent as the Government appears to be about deaths and injuries on our roads.

In pleading that the really dangerous offences shall continue to be treated seriously we submit from long experience that a short sentence long experience that a short sentence of imprisonment imposed soon after the offence by a magistrates' court has a greater deterrent effect on other potential offenders than a longer sentence imposed by the Crown Court months later. To increase the maximum fines from £100 to £400 is merely academic having regard to the means of many of the offenders who come before the general run of magistrates' courts.

Moreover, if serious motoring offences were no longer imprisonable in magistrates' courts, these courts would also be deprived of the power to make orders for attendance centre. detention centre or community ser-vice, because these can only be imposed for imprisonable offences.

Magistrates would also lose the power to compel a defendant to attend court after conviction (for instance, to find out his means before deciding upon a fine).

If all these consequential powers are removed, juvenile courts in particular will have no adequate sanction for young tearaways consanction for young tealaways con-victed of dangerous or "excess alcohol" driving since their means seldom permit substantial fines to be imposed. Those of us who have urged progressive alternatives like community service are indeed discouraged if they are to be ruled out for the road traffic offences, which make up two-thirds of the work of magistrates' courts.

We beg Her Majesty's Government to reconsider these issues. Imprisonment for road traffic offences is very rarely imposed by magistrates' courts (the letter of November 19 gave figures). But the fact that a driver who is dangerous or has excess alcohol may be imprisoned by a magistrates' court is a powerful deterrent to putting others in mortal peril on the roads. Yours faithfully.

Young offenders From Mrs E. B. Schaffer

Sir. I note that the Advisory Council on the Penal System in England presses for more non-custodial sen-tences for young offenders because of the failure and damage caused by custody. This is a conclusion that few who work with young offenders would dispute. However, a cause for concern is that, once again the probation officer is seen as the person who should give supervision in the community. Is it not time that we stopped throwing responsibility for alternatives to custody on to the overburdened and, sometimes, in-adequate shoulders of the social workers? Perhaps recent experience in Scotland has made one somewhat cautious regarding the ability (both in time and experience) of social workers to supervise delinquents workers to supervise delinquents adequately.

Why do we not set up a special young offender service, staffed by personnel having specialist skills in youth and community work, residential and non-residential social work, psychology and trade skills? The service could have responsibility for young offender institutions, which young offender institutions, which should range from the closed type now in existence to hostel type accommodation. The service should also be responsible for all supervision of young offenders in the com-

Ideally each court should have a young offender team attached to assist in the initial decision regarding the most suitable type of super-vision—open or closed custody or supervision in the community. If the initial decision proved unsatisfactory the client could be transferred to another area of the service for

It is time that we admitted that the care and supervision of young offenders requires not only an enormous investment of time but also highly specialized qualities and training. Social work skills and training are not only inadequate but may also be a handicap—a point sug-gested in Mr David Mathieson's letter to your paper today (May 27). Setting up a new service would, in the long run, be no more expensive than a steady procession of failures due to inadequate care.
In Scotland the Social Work Act of 1968 set up a new and highly successful profession-the reporters to the hearings. This group has developed a professional identity and expertise with astonishing speed and now giving an extremely effective service.

Patching up old and tired methods and institutions may be quick and, initially, cheap, but is it not time that we tried to break the sad circle of failure with the young offender and tried something new? Concorde costs From Lord Orr-Ewing

Sir, In early March the Government concorde at £80m and the cost of completing 16 aircraft at £115m. At the time I stated that the cancellation costs had been grossly underestimated as they had not taken into account compensation to the 300 principal sub-contractors making equipment, nor did they contain any estimate of the cost of compensation to the French.
Later Lord Beswick told the House of Lords that there "would undoubtedly be additional indirect costs and social dis-benefits". It is now estimated that the total cancellation cost would not be £80m but £132m (without French compensation). In the meantime progress has been made in constructing the 16 aircraft and another £100m would complete the job.

In the face of these facts we could, by going ahead, save at least £32m by going ahead, save at least 152in and have 16 aircraft to show for our efforts. Surely no government in its senses would send these aircraft to the scrapheap before they have had a chance of flying the routes and testing the passenger appeal so confidently mediated. fidently predicted. Middle East terrorism From Mr Michael Adams

Sir, In your editorial (May 23) about Dr Kissinger's efforts to achieve a disengagement agreement between Syria and Israel, you refer—in terms which I am sure the vast majority of your readers would echo-to the "appalling drama at Maalot" and the "savage Israeli reprisels" which the "savage Israeli reprisels" followed against the Lebanon.

However, there is one phrase in this passage of your editorial with which I find it impossible to agree; and from my reading of the public reaction to these events. I believe that many others feel as I believe that many others feel as I do. You write of the Israeli actions against the Lebanon that "because they are reprisals, they are not on the same level of cynical and amoral cruelty as the massacre at Maalot—although you go on to say, rightly, that they have caused more deaths, not sparing women and children, and have probably sown the seeds of terrorism in the minds of yet more Palestinian refugees". (I would substitute "certainly" for "prob-

I hold no brief whatever for the Palestinian action at Maalot; to me it was brutal and senseless. So were the Israeli reprisals—but if there was a difference between the one and the other, surely the reprisals were more cynical and amoral, being the calculated actions of a govern-ment with which we maintain polite relations, which is a party to international conventions governing the behaviour of civilized communities, but which in this instance was engaging in deliberate and indiscriminate mass murder of undefended civilians.

To defend such behaviour on the ground that these were reprisals shows a curious (and certainly not a Christian) sense of values. It is also illogical. The Palestinians' action was itself a reprisal, against those who had dispossessed them and built the settlement of Maalot on the ruins of an Arab village. Does this excuse their action in your eyes? Archaeological heritage From Mr Henry Cleere

Sir, I read your Archaeological Cor-respondent's article "Why archaeo-logists must explore the present" (May 24) with the greatest interest and appreciation. His assessment of the problem confronting archaeologists in Britain is a very percipient

As a result of the growth in the threat to our archaeological heri-tage, coupled with the increase in Government funds for rescue excavation and survey for 1974-75 to 51,063,000, many more posts are available in Britain for professional archaeologists. The time has come for them to lay down professional standards and to establish their pro-fession as one of equal standing with, for example, engineers, architects and surveyors.

It may interest you to know that the Council for British Archaeology has been aware of this need for some time. In 1973 it set up a working party to examine the whole problem professionalism in archaeology. One of the recommendations of this working party was that the CBA should encourage the establishment of a professional institution for archaeologists; this recommenda-tion has been approved by the CBA's Executive Committee, and a steering committee has been convened. It is hoped that the new institution will hold its inaugural meeting early in Manchester United supporters forced the abandonment of a game; but it did not save the club from relegation to the second division anyway.

The fact that the pattern of violence is well established in no way excuses the behaviour which Tottenham fans displayed in Rotterdam. This was a particularly shocking example of vandalism, and British people as a whole cannot but feel a sense of shame that the Dutch hosts were given such a bad example of British youth. It calls for something more than a mere apology The Spurs manager, Mr Bill-Nicholson, did his best to quell the outburst, both before the game started and later. But clearly by the time the club's over-excited supporters had reaks of fighting on the reached the ground it was too ments to have much effect. Given the very serious circumstances of the case, it would seem proper for the British club to make good the damage done. A large cheque will not by itself wipe out the disgrace to the name of British football, but it would at least be compensation for the physical damage. It would, indeed, be a nice gesture if Spurs could assemble a group of their supporters to go over to Rotterdam to help clear up some of the mess at the stadium.

The root of the trouble—as everyone knows-lies in the pervasive atmosphere of violence, on and off the field, at British and other football grounds generally. A serious attempt has been made by clubs to discipline their players and a variety of measures are under consideration to improve crowd control. It will be a sad day when moats or wire fences separate spectators from players on all major grounds. But the rioting in Rotterdam underlines the case for radical action.

Freedom of speech

From Mr Jonathan Guinness
Sir, Professor Roy Edgley says in a letter you published on May 29,
"Freedom of speech for Levin seems to mean freedom to propagate a pack of lies". Enemies of freedom have usually used this argument in some form. The fact is, of course, that freedom of speech most certainly includes freedom to propagate any pack of lies desired. However, since it also includes the freedom to discuss and refute them, it is selfcorrecting. correcting.
Obviously this self-correcting mechanism does not work either perfectly or immediately; but it does work. Considering the volubility of opponents of American's war effort in Vietnam, it is hard to believe that any "lies" that Professor Huntington might have told would have remained unanswered.

However, modern academics seem to prefer to suppress a man and then, unheard, to insult him. Against this corruption it is the duty of everyone to protest; thank God for Levin. Yours faithfully, JONATHAN GUINNESS,

A cruiser from Jutland From Mr J. P. Q. Switzer

Sir, May 31 is the anniversary of the Battle of Jutland. One ship which took part in the battle is still affoat, the light cruiser HMS Caroline. She was launched in 1914, and is still in commission (as headquarters ship of the Ulster division of the Royal Naval Reserve). Reserve). As a nation we have been well served over the preservation of his-toric buildings. The foresight and energy of the Department of the Environment (and its predecessor, the Ministry of Works), of the National Trust, and of many private owners, has given us a wonderful physical record of our national story. The preservation of historic ships however has been almost totally neglected until recently HMS Vic-tory was the only restored and preserved warship in this country. In particular it has always seemed to me amentable that we did not preserve one of the great ships of the Dreadnought or post-Dreadnought era.

HMS Iron Duke, Jellicoe's flagship at Jurland, was still afloat in 1945 and should be lying alongside Victory in Portsmouth dockyard. Fortunately private initiative has in the nick of time taken steps to preserve for us a fine series of war-ships from Foudroyant and Unicorn, frigates of 1817 and 1824, to Belfast and Cavalier, a cruiser and destroyer of the war of 1939-45. The nation owes a great debt to the Maritime Trust and the various independent trusts who are carrying out this work for us. The cost is enormous—for example, I understand that Foudroyant and Unicorn will each require about a quarter of a million pounds to restore fully. All this money is privately given.

Could not public funds be used now to support this work by restor-ing HMS Caroline? Could she not be opened to the public, perhaps in Portsmouth dockyard, in two years time, the sixtieth anniversary of Jurland, as a monument to those who built the Grand Fleet and served in Yours faithfully.

French election chivalry From Mr Stafford Bourne

Sir, Those who happened to be in France and took an interest in the Presidential elections must have been impressed by the dignified and intelligent demeanour of their politicians on television. In particular, the long debate between MM Giscard d'Estaing and Mitterand was a model of urbanity and courteous presentation of their arguments in marked contrast to the bad manners, sneers and spitefulness to which we in England are subjected. I hope the French standards were observed by the BBC and by our politicians.

He was a man of consumding idealism and personal force and, when his abjunces could be overcome, of great personal charm. He had been much spoken of as a possible future President of Mexico and he deliberately gave up this pros-pect to become the second Director-General (in succession to Sir Julian Hundey) of Linesco.

He believed that the preser varion of peace depended upon the development of organs of world order, bur no less upon the elimination of the great gap between the richer Countries and the poorer, and of this the level of literacy was one of the most shameful. But machinery by itself would do little. He believed that education must be an education for humanity as a whole and not, as it has been simply for membership of on national communities.

Torres Boder was not alway easy to work for. But this wa only because of the defects of his virtues. I remember one being called down to his root rather late on a Friday to fir him distressed that despite if efforts Unesco had made litt difference, through education to the cause of world peace.

The two dogs, Asterion (the northerly one) and Chara did not become a separate constellation until the seventeenth-century. The two stars marked on our map are in Chara, and the brighter is named Cor Caroli, meaning Charles's Heart (King Charles II?). It is a double star within reach of small instruments. There are several doubles in Bootes. Of these, delra (to the left of B) has a greater separation than Cor Caroli. Epstion (to the left of E) is a famous coloured pair but requires a better telescope, and the two on the left of Arcturus, pi and zeta, are doubles of the "better telescope" class. Major-General J. Mappin and Webb is the latest firm to have sent me news of its Churchill silver. Garrard went modern, but Mappins has stuck to tradition. The sterling silver gobiet is gilded inside, costs £95, and sells in ones, twos, or sixes in presentation boxes. The edition runs to

The decanter, also silver and silver gift, is in an edition of 100 only, sells singly or in pairs, and is decorated with the Mariborough anns (5525 each). The "waiters", or trais (not shown), sell only with complete sets. The diameter is 14th, Mso, ten sets are to be made of gold—price on application. Odyssev gives you games to play on a television screen.

•An Odyssey in any games room brings a new dimension to ping pong or billiards because

It consists of a master unit, about 14in by 9in, which plugs into the aerial point of your television set. Pick a cassette of the sport of your choice—table tennis, tennis or hockey—and clip it into the master unit. You then release the ball and turn knobs on the master unit to guide your bats or racquets to field, return, or serve the ball. You can even put a curve on the ball to fool your opponent but you have to be pretty quick with the knobs. A rifle range attachment is £25 extra.

Odyssev is made in the United States by Magnavox, the big electronics firm, and converted here to fit British sets. I found myself better at tennis than I thought—this is a game for quick reactions, but you don't have to dash all over a court but have to dash all over a court but can just stand there and play. Not that I mind the dashing, but courts aren't easy to book in London. Odyssev costs £110 (VAT included) from Etcetera Gift Boutiques in Golders Green, Edgware and St John's Wood (see London directory for addresses). The most important point about any gift, whatever it costs, is the fact of its being chosen especially for you. I am touched when people fact of its being chosen especially for you. I am touched when people remember my favourite colours; or when they send cards that have some relevance to my life, to some joke or incident we shared, or to reflect my interests.

So I welcome a new kind of greeting card, which is just right for the occasion when you want to give more than a token but not an expensive present. These cost from around 14p to 18p and, though

The cards are cut-out pieces to make up into models. Or, rather, most of them are cut-outs, of stiffish card, although there are some pictures to paint for the very young and some pictures to make by joining the dots. An ingenious example of a get well card is a snakes-and-ladders board in miniature, complete with little card counters to cut out.

All tastes are catered for My Girl Friday gave her boyfriend a bus and herself a country cottage with roses round the door. Having got the bug, they started inventing excuses to buy more birthday cards to cut out and sat making up the models.

THE CARLTON TOWER point-of-view

You have to come up to the 18th floor of London's Carlton Tower to discover an unsurpassed view that has come to symbolize this hotel's point-of-view.

Step from the air-conditioned elegance of the Tower Suite onto a south-facing terrace.

Plumb at your feet there's Cadogan Place, the local residential park frequented by nannies from the nearby town houses, and regarded affectionately as The Carlton Tower's 'front garden'. Let your eye survey the glossy stucco facades of Belgravia, soar right along over the bijou boutiques of Chelsea, across the Thames, and as far as the Surrey Hills.

Now take a turn about this 18th floor. From the adjoining Belgravia Suite (cane chairs as the Raj might have known them) you're facing east - and that presents you with the other, landmarked side of London: Buckingham Palace, the Houses of Parliament, Westminster Abbey and St. Paul's.

Unfussed urbanity

That is The Carlton Tower point-ofview: to be the modern luxury hotel that lets you know you're in London by the traditional grace of its welcome, the sumptuous contemporaneity of its style, the unfussed urbanity of what habitues come to appreciate as The Carlton Tower way-of-life: in London, very much of London, formal and fizzing all in one unflurried sweep.

Take an elevator down a floor or two and come inside one of the hotel's newlydecorated luxury suites - a fantasia of silvers and greens, where impish harlequins and columbines wink at you from the walls: another aspect of The Carlton Tower point-of-view.

Marco Polo wrote of the hotel system set up by the Great Khan: These were large, handsome buildings, having several well-furnished apartments, hung with silk, and provided with everything suitable to persons of rank. Even kings may be lodged here in a becoming manner.

There's something of that spirit about The Carlton Tower's new luxury suites. One almost has to ask, Can this be a hotel room? before remembering that when you stay at The Carlton Tower it becomes your home. For this is the hotel whose modest assertion is that guests don't merely stay here - they live here. (And whenever they're living at The Carlton Tower, the hotel preserves to perfection its famous guests' anonymity.)

Unmistakable

Come, let's sit down in this room as the sun pours in from the west, a great golden stream of light. (As in every one of the hotel's 320 rooms, there's air-conditioning to make sure you stay cool, double-glazing to keep London's roar down to a tiny whisper: this is your room, after all.)

after a night about town whisking from theatre to cabaret and home again: The Carlton Tower will always greet you, smiling and attentive.

There's a certain unmistakable zest about a successful modern enterprise. Drake and Raleigh would recognize its scent. It's in the very sparkle of a lyric by Noel Coward.

That's another aspect of The Carlton Tower point-of-view. You'll find it, for example, in the hotel's famous Rib Room amid the finest roast beef in all England.

The selection of prime beef for the Rib Room is an art. Chef de cuisine Bernard Gaume seeks, in a manner that Escoffier himself would approve, for meat with a grain that is smooth, as in fine silk. He finds the piece that's perfect. Then the beef is hung for

The City of London, over the past 10 years and particularly over the past five, has established, for itself a monopoly of the ship finance. market. Over the next four years the world's ship order-book is expected to require $40,000m to $50,000m. This time last year, there was no doubt that the larger part of it would be negotiated in London through the banks, brokers and finance houses. going through the House of Commons has changed the picture, and London's parti-cipation in ship finance and support services is expected to decline significantly if the Bill is passed in its present

Certain key trends are coming out of London : charters (which ensure cash flow) need to be extended from the popular three years of recent times, and escalation clauses need to be tied to some kind of operating inflation index suitable to

If the worst came to the worst, and supertankers became unsalable, prices would drop drastically. Deals involving supertankers as loan security would begin to look uncertain. British marine equipment command considerable respect.

The standards of research and development have remeined consistently high, and the United Kingdom industry has considerable reserves of engineering skill and knowledge acquired over many years which have ensured that the industry has been able to provide a strong and sustained challenge to its more youthful competitors.

Mr Vokker said gold would figure prominently in the dis-cussions on June 12 and 13 of the ministers of the Committee of Twenty on monetary reform.

Another major issue at the Washington meeting will be a United States proposal for an international agreement strengthening the powers of the International Monetary Find to prevent countries taking unilateral trade actions that could be internationally harmful for balance of payments

This agreement would go considerably further than the general 12-month pledge being signed by ministers at the meeting in Paris today of the Organi-zation for Economic Coopera-tion and Development.

The Senate yesterday passed an amendment to legislation siving $1,500m (£625m) to the litternational Development Association that would allow Americans to buy and sell gold freely from September 1. Many overseas banks are among larger creditors of Stern Group

A large number of overseas banks and a building society have emerged as creditors of the troubled Stern Group, which recently called in Mr Kenneth Cork, the City accountant, to discuss ways of effecting an orderly realization of the group's property assets.

This follows the disclosure that the Crown Agents, along banks including First National Finance Corporation and Keyser Ullmann had lent substantial funds to the group. Among those most heavily involved is International Marine Banking, a subsidiary of the United States Marine Midland Bank, which had advanced around £6.3m for a period of 10 years to Stern companies by last June.

Other subsidiaries of American banks which have registered charges on the group's assets include First National City Bank, with nearly £24m on the mortgage registers in Com-panies House; First Interna-tional Bancshares, a subsidiary of the Texas-based bank of the Same name, with over film; and Continental Hinois which has made a number of advances of unspecified amounts.

Continental and other overseas banks have also registered charges on a number of Stern properties. Just over two months ego International Credit Bank of Geneva recorded a charge for £1m, owed by Metropolitan Pro-perty Holdings, the leading property company in the Stern empire.

The Trade Development Bank has extended a number of loans and there are also minor advances from the Bank of Nova Scotia, First Chicago and Banque Beige, while the Swiss Israel Trade Bank and Bank Leumi (UK) have also been involved in It is clear from a study of the 1971.

the overseas banks have played an increasing part in the British property market over the past 18 months. Many of these oanks had made advances to the Lyon Group, whose troubles have been well publicized.

The largest charges that are quantified in Companies House, however, relate to the Crown Agents. Mr E. A. Morris, a former Crown Agent, is chairman of Nation Life, the life assurance subsidiary of Stern Family Holdings. Over £7m appears on the registers in the name of Four Millbank Nominage. name of Four Milloank Nomi-nees, a Crown Agent company. And many British secondary banks such as Old Broad Street Securities and Sir Isaac Wolfson's Anglo-Portuguese Bank, appear frequently.

Few of the overseas banks approached by Business News yesterday were prepared to comment on their position. One. however, acknowledged that the Stern Group was in technical stern Group was in technical default over its advances. And a spokesman for the building society. Nationwide, which advanced a 20-year mortgage of £60,000 to Metropolitan Property Holdings in mid-1972 on the security of two blocks of flats, said that the society had hear harmy to advance money to been happy to advance money to the group on flats built for letting. He added that he was satisfied that the transactions the society had entered into with the Stern Group had been good business.

It is still not clear what led directly to the appointment of Mr Cork and the suspension of the shares of the Stern Group's quoted off-shoot Dares Estates. However, the property activities of Metropolitan Property Holdings have enjoyed an astonishing expansion since Mr William Stern broke away from the property group of his father-in-law Mr Osias Freshwater, in Initially it was primarily a residential property company, having acquired 20 blocks of flats from Freshwater in 1971. It then nearly doubled the portfolio with the acquisition of Key Flats from Metropolitan Estate and Property Corporation, and was involved in a large and controversial joint operation with First National Pinance Corporation to "break up" many London flats.

Since then, however, the emphasis has been mainly commercial. By autumn last year the company had a development progamme that was expected to cost £100m over the next three to four years. Its operations extended throughout Britain and on to the Continent. The wider interests of Mr Stern extended into banking, insurance, print-ing and publishing, and building materials in Europe, America and Israel.

It is likely that the collapse of the property market dealt the crucial blow to the group, which was relatively highly geared. On June 30, 1973, Metropolitan Property Holdings had prop-Property Holdings had properties, including its stakes in associated and unconsolidated subsidiaries of £117m. Borrowings, stood at £89.6m.

the greater part in short or medium-term money. Moreover, this figure probably understates the true position. The loans to unconsolidated and associate companies are not disclosed and Metropolitan also had guarantees outstanding to these companies of nearly £20m.

The company's stated policy was to maintain its completed and to sell completed industrial developments in order to mee the interest on its borrowings. The unwillingness of institutions to buy these industrial developments in recent weeks, a factor which brought matters to a nead at the Lyon Group, could well have precipitated the crisis.

Paris. May 30 Twenty-four of the world's leading industrial nations today pledged themselves here not to resort to "beggar my neigh-bour" trading measures over the next 12 months.

They approved this "code of good conduct" at a meeting of the Council of Ministers of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development to help maintain normal trade flows and jobs despite the unprecedented balance of payments deficits now facing many of these countries.

As the meeting ended it became known in the corridors of the OECD that the finance ministers of the old "Group of Ten" countries are to come together again in Washington just before the "Committee of Twenty" of the International Monetary Fund assemble on June 12.

The Group of ten-United States, Britain, West Germany, States, Britain. West Germany, France, Japan. Canada, Italy, Belgium. The Netherlands and Sweden—will discuss the parallel problem of financing these balance of payments deficits provoked by higher oil and raw material prices.

Interim report for the period from October 1, 1973 to March 31, 1974

Major contracts boost export sales

During the first half of the financial year begun October 1, 1973, new order receipts attained a total value of £ 1,713 million, with a vigorous 16% increase closely approximating the 17% growth for the comparable period of the preceding year. Whilst domestic orders experienced a barely perceptible rise, foreign orders increased by 29%, as against last year's 26%, thanks largely to several major export orders received in the second quarter. Orders on hand, which increased 14% to a total of £ 2,610 million, reflect an average capacity utilization of more than 10 months.

Sales gained 9%, vs. 11% last year, with a somewhat better growth recorded abroad than at home. A slight increase in the number of employees was attended by a 14% rise in employment costs. The cost of materials likewise took an appreciable upturn. Generally intensified cost pressures compelled further price markups. The capacity utilization of our plants in Germany and abroad showed only slight improvement. In line with corporate planning, capital outlays were increased 15%. Having acquired the business and assets of Dickson Electronics Corporation, a U.S. electronics firm located in Scottsdale, Arizona, we continue its operations under the name of DEC Corporation. Encouraged by our manufacturing venture in Singapore, we established a new components manufacturing company in Malaysia. In consequence of semiannual net earnings of £38 million. our net margin increased slightly to 2.9%, as compared with 2.7%

Southampton hoping to get large part of S African container trade

By Peter Hill
Intensive efforts will be made over the next few months by several of Britain's large ports to secure all, or part of, the lucrative United Kingdom South Africa trade when it is switched to containerization in 1977.

Although the shipping lines have yet to decide on the location of the United Kingdom terminals, it is already evident that the British Transport Docks Board regards Southampton as

Board regards Southampton as the leading contender. Sir Humphrey Browne, chairman of the BTDB, speaking in London yesterday said: "We shall get half of it (the trade) for sure."

It is clear that the BTDB in its advocacy of Southampton's case is primarily concerned with the Port of London Authority, which contends that the new seaport at contends that the new seaport at Maplin is necessary and could attract the South African trade. Through Overseas Containers

Limited (OCL) and Associated Comainer Transportation (ACT), the shipping lines have asked for tenders from authorities responsible for the operation of ports on the Tees, Mersey, Clyde, Humber and together with the PLA and the BTDB, have also asked for tenders from Felixstowe and Bristol.

Tenders are scheduled to be submitted later next week, although Sir Humphrey stressed that because of the detailed nature of the submissions, dis-cussions were likely to extend for several weeks

In a reference of the Maplin project in his annual statement, the BTDB chairman said: "The board strongly believes that, for handling containers, the nation has at Southampton an existing port with established potential and one which had already proved its success as a base for container trades. Southamping possesses very distinct regraphical and marine advantages and can be readily expanded at comparatively low rost."

Plant for an extension of the present facilities are to be submitted later this year. Sir Humphrey said that a 2000ft extension at Southamping could be built for about 25m—about a fifth of the estimated cast of

Competition | Output of warning by rail chief

A warning that it would be disastrous for the nation if the necessary investment in the country's rail network was sacrificed "to short-term expediency" was given yesterday by Mr. D. Bowick, chief executive (railways) of the British Railways Board.

Mr Bowick, advessing the transportation engineering group of the Institution of Civil Engineers in London, said the board planned progressive improvement of its network of provement of its network of inter-urban services over the next decade and beyond. The investment would be repaid in commercial terms from the extra earnings of "an already highly profitable business".

The plans, he said, would best serve the national interest by serve the national interest by relieving the many problems created by growing road traffic on the most heavily used routes between key urban centres. He added: "The implication is that cutting the properties of cuttimeat competition between air, rail and coach over the main national interest

Mr Bowick said the new understanding of the need for pollu-tion control, respect for the environment and energy conser-vation led to a fairly optimistic assessment of rail's future development to meet inter-city urban travel needs.

The case for road transport was put by Mr A. J. West, distribution planning manager for RHM Foods, who said the real problem was that as a nation, we had not planned ahead sufficiently

castings falls 8.4 pc

Output of Britain's ironfounding industry in the first three months of this year fell by 8.4 per cent on a seasonally adjusted basis compared with the corresponding period of last year. The drop in production to $10,000 tonnes over the period frum a level of $23,000 tonnes a year earlier reflects the effects of the energy crisis and the miners strike.

The Council of Ironfoundry

Associations said yesterday that compared with the final quarter of last year, there had been a substantial reduction in the tonnage of ingot moulds produced for the steel industry and in the output of car and miscellaneous

The council said that smaller declines were recorded in the production of engineering and building domestic castings, but against the general trend, the pressure pipes and fittings sec-tor increased its output by more than 12 per cent.
"The results reflect a period of abnormal conditions. But, although they represent a seri-ous setback to the industry's performance in the current year, they are above the worst expec-tations and in excess of the 766,000 tonnes which was produced in the first quarter of 1972, which was similarly affected by a coal strike", said the council.

The industry could derive comfort from the strong demand for iron castings, and if this continued much of the lost production could be recovered in the remaining months of the year, it said.

GREEN'S ECONOMISER GROUP LIMITED

Extracts from the Report and Accounts for 1973 and from Mr. S. L. Green's Statement to shareholders:

TRADING REVIEW: Group turnover rose 17.0%; Group trading profit advanced 23.2%, and pre-tax profit, which had the benefit of significantly higher interest earnings, rose 36.4%. The improved results reflect the benefits of previous years' reorganization and investment decisions coupled with continuing efforts to improve efficiency. More than 40% of 1973 turnover derived from products introduced since 1969. In South Africa recovery continued in the second half and profits for the year have exceeded our expectations.

DIVIDENDS: An interim of 0.735p per share was paid in January 1974 on the Company's enlarged capital and a final dividend of 1.055p per share (maximum permissible)

FUTURE PROSPECTS: The upturn in capital investment in 1973 resulted in a high level of order intake, and this has continued in the early months of 1974. Production and deliveries have held up well so far this year. With order books at record levels in all sections we currently expect a further expansion in turnover and profit in 1974.

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING: At the Annual General Meeting the Chairman added to his circulated statement by indicating that the Board bad now approved an expansion programme for the facilities at Wakefield.

The sixty-fifth annual general meeting of Harcros Investment True Limited will be held in London on 26th June. The following is an extra front the statement by the Chairman, Mr. J. F. E. GILCHRIST, O.B.E. which has been circulated with the report and accounts.

Gross revenue was affected, to some extent, by the re-arrangement by certain companies of dividend payment dates for taxation reason. The expected fall in plantation income during the year following such change was reduced by the higher payments resulting from the improved conditions for that industry and showed a decline of onl $2,735 on last year. With a substantial increase from £174,181 thigh interest rates earned on our liquid funds, we are able to report provious year. The Board recommercial and industrial holdings an record gross revenue figure of £443,025 compared with £416,583 for the 10p stock unit. With the interim dividend, the total distribution to the year is equivalent to 1.95p gross, compared with 1.85p paid to 1974.

the year is equivalent to 1.95p gross, compared with 1.85p paid in 1972/3.

The year under review was marked by rapidly escalating worldwid infiation, the restriction of supplies from the oil producing countrie but at greatly increased cost with consequent strain on balances o payments and international currencies. In the U.K., many companie were further handicapped by the effects of various restrictions arisin from the coal miners' overtime ban. Prices on world stock exchange showed severe falls. At the end of March the Financial Times ordinar showed severe falls. At the end of March the Financial Times ordinar showed a fall of 41.4% over our year. The plantation sector, however relative to the general index. We benefited from this situation as a 31st March our net asset value of 45p per mait was 20.6% below the record figure of 56p reported a year previously.

Results for the current year are difficult to predict. The outlook for the plantation industry is favourable and our policy of concentration that general section of the portfolio on companies with export an capital growth although income will continue at present to be affect by standory dividend control. We are hopeful that barring a serior fiscal policies, we shall be able to show a satisfactory currons to be affected.

Group profit after tax has increased from £860,000 in 1972 to £1.3 million in 1973. The profit of the parent company has increased from £640,000 to £730,000. Noted will be the very heavy increase in taxetion shown in the accounts from £188,000 in 1972 to £1.3 million in 1973, parity as a result of 1973 budgetary changes.

Shipping Activities

1973 was a year of boom for the shipping industry. Unfortunately our Group was imable to benefit in full by mason of the itment of our large ships to Seabsidge. Our colleagues in Seabridge have agreed that we may leave that consortium without penalty on giving three years' notice, which has duly been done. Our interest in the South American Liner trades in now much reduced. Changes in these trades must occur over the next decade when the low cost ships at present employed will have to be replaced. Three old ships were sold during the year and a 31,000 cubic metre LPG carrier, a 26,000 ten bulk camer and a small second-hand dry cargo ship have been ordered since the end of the year.

Other Operations

The Houlder Group are providing the operating personnel for the two oil drilling rigs now under construction in Finland in which Houlder Line has an interest through Kingsnorth Marine Drilling Ltd. The first of these rigs has been chartered to a major oil company on satisfactory terms. This should be a profitable venture. The time has barely arrived to place the second rig on the market for charter, but in the meanting we have agreed to take an interest in a Norwegian ng for which: Houlder Group will also provide the operating personnel: Houlder Line has also ventured into the unusual field of providing surface support for the coupling of large diameter pipes in deep water and converted an ore carrier, m.v. April sales of gas cookers show 54 pc rise

Signs that the Government's decision to peg gas prices, announced in the Rudget speech in March, may have had an immediate effect on sales of gas appliances is contained in figures issued by the British Gas Corporation yesterday. These show that sales of gas cookers increased by 54 per cent during April compared with the corresponding month last year.

The sudden increase in the month after the price announcement follows several years of stagnating or slightly falling gas cooker sales. During the three months up to the end of March, sales had dropped by about 7 per cent compared with last year. Results for the 12 months ending March showed a fall of about 10 per cent against the corresponding preceding year.

The British Gas figures show that 45,425 cookers were sold during April at an average cost of between £75 and £80.

TRONOH MINES LIMITED

Extracts from the Statement by the Chairman, Mr. J. G. Richardson, for the year ended 31st December, 1973.

Production of Tronoh and its subsidiaries was 2,749 metric tons compared with 3,235 metric tons for 1972.

Net Group profit was £422,134 against £759,484 for 1972. Two interim dividends totalling 2.975p per share net have been paid equivalent to a gross amount of 4.373p per share Production for the current year is expected to be similar to that for 1973. However, there has been a very substantial increase in the average tin metal price in Penang which averaged $1,049 per picul for the first quarter of the current year, and the sustained high level since then is contributing greatly to the Company's profitability, and increased profits for 1974 are looked forward to with confidence.

An agreement has been reached with the Perak State Development Corporation to exploit a large area adjacent to the Company's existing leases and a company is being formed for this purpose in which Tronoh will have a 70% interest. This is the first major tin dredging operation in partnership with a State Government and is an important development for the long term future of the Company.

Interim Dividend

An interim dividend of 0.875 pence per fully paid Ordinary share (1973-0.875 pence) in respect of the year ending 30th September 1974, will be paid on 14th August 1974, to shareholders on the Register on 17th July 1974. This will absorb £471,340.

Results

The Group started the year well with a continuation of the strong upward trend that characterised the results of the previous year, although the miners' strike in February and March and the three-day working week inevitably affected some of the industrial subsidiaries.

In the industrial services and distribution sector activity is high but demand is slowing for construction products. Our engineering subsidiaties have good order books, although they are still contending with the aftermath of earlier national dislocation. New products are being introduced and the improvement of production facilities continues. In insurance broking positive progress is sustained. Further promising proposals are in hand in the provision of development capital. Banking has been active whilst retaining its strong liquid position.

The present economic environment continues to make it difficult to forecast the immediate future but present indications are that the pre-tax profit for the full year will not be materially different from that of last year. Overall the strength of the Group is in the range of its activities.

Recruitment of miners higher since strike

By Edward Townsend The trend of manpower wast age in Britain's mining industry over the past 17 years has under gone a hig reversal, almost entirely caused by the £160m settlement of the miners' strike Government figures show that

The news will provide considerable encouragement to the participants of the Government's tripartite inquiry into the longthe future of the coal industry. The inquiry, in which both the National Union of Mineworkers and the National Coal Board are taking part, is expected to pub-lish an interim report next The Japanese government, confronted with protests from black Africa, is studying suggestions for restraining the rapid growth of trade relations with South Africa, a foreign office official revealed today.

The NCB, in presenting its £1,500m "Plan for Coal" to the Government, stressed that five key points were essential to the revival of the industry, includng higher recruitment and better productivity.

Last night the board released recruitment figures for the week ending May 11, which continued to show a sharp increase over the same period of last year, particularly in the mun-bers of workers returning to the pits after having left for other

In the week, total recruitment was 731 against 367 a year pre-viously and included 116 juveniles, 199 adults and 416 reentrants. Wastage during the week was 184 against 354 a year earlier. Every NCB region except Scotland—which lost 24 workers in the week-benefited from the increase.

Coal production in April at 9.1 million tons was below the 10.7 million tons produced in April last year, although this year's period included the full Easter holiday. Low activity levels in the pits indicate that the effects of the strike are still being felt, with some collieries not able to complete the backlog of maintenance work until the end of the year.

Average output per manshift was 41.86 cwt in April against 46.99 cwt in April last year, although total absenteeism in the two months fell from 16.8 per cent last year to 13.4 per Sir, Your Shipping Correspondent (May 25) has drawn public attention to the complaint of a number of shipping lines that productivity in Britain's ports is now so low that it takes up to three times as long to handle cargo and costs up to four times as much as in Continental ports such as Rotterdam, Antwerp and Hamburg.

Sea freight: the switch

Simultaneously through the trade journals, the chairman of the West Middlesex Shipping Executives Association has pointed to the crippling effect on our trade of inadequate cargo capacity on almost all of the prime United Kingdom liner services—and his has not been a lone voice.

Perhaps not surprisingly, we also have a continuing and rapid increase in the number of unit oad freight vehicles ferried across the North Sea and English Channel

One wonders to what extent the latter growth in short sea freight traffic is a direct consequence of the prevailing liner and port productivity situations. Is this not all part of the same scenario? Are our merchants becoming permanently obliged to conduct their overseas busi-ness via the major Continental ports? This they did tem-

that the growth in cross Channel trade is being used as some justification for the allocation of enormous sums in national resources on construction of a Channel tunnel. It is against this background that the Minister for Transport Industries has refused a public inquiry to check the facts.

How can we be sure that by constructing this fixed link we would not simply be treating one superficial symptom of a much greater malaise. Far from effecting any "cure" might it not in the long term greatly exacerbate the underlying economic condition? In short, Sir. have we got our national priori-ties right? Yours faithfully,

Dearer electricity: an added burden in the peak hours

From Mr R. Hobroyde the public who require only Sir, Mr T. H. Rimmer's letter (May 17), is absolutely right. My own consumption of off-peak ediate heat when they return home from work of an evening for a meal, and then are often units for storage heaters over the past year (using four out of five heaters) was 10,123, and with an increase of 0.3p per unit will involve me in an additional cost of £30.36. This added to the 30 per cent increase for ordinary units will cost me approximately 900 a week extra. Off-peak storage heating is convenient, but even at half-price is a fairly expensive form of central heating. With the extra 0.3p per unit it becomes a burden which few users will be able to bear. The only possible ouccome R. HOLROYDE, will be for consumers to switch out of an evening, the electric fire is adequate. It will be on for a shorter period—possibly first thing in the morning and in the evening for meals—but at the very time when consumption is at its peak. The off-peak storage heating was an incentive to avoid use at peak periods, but what are the area electricity boards going to do to avoid even heavier consumption at peak hours? Anything less than half-price units will make storage heaters uneconomical. Yours faithfully,

Recruitment of technicians

From Dr J. Ballard Sir, In their letter published in your edition of May 9, Mr J. Boulton and others commented Boulton and others commented on the low number and relatively poor quality of United Kingdom students coming forward for training as technicians and technologists. In the main I must support this view, as applied to technicians, while recalling with pleasure however the very sizable minority of extremely worthwhile students I have encountered during several years of technical col-several years of technical colcorrespondents see these defici-encies in our technician and technologist supply as partly due to inefficient usage and inferior status and rewards. May I add that in my experience all this is compounded and perpetuated by the out-dated image of the technician still widely held in most of our schools? Even now couraged towards technician careers and careers masters, while attempting to give un-biased advice, can often display considerable personal ignorance of the function and importance of technical support staff.

Issues behind worker

Sir, I find it very odd that De Frank Heller should be talking about "preliminary steps" in research on worker participation and that Professor Schmitthoff should be countering by talking about research actually having been carried our in this field during the past two

This is an extraordinarily provincial approach to the subject. of worker participation on which major research has been done, especially in the United States, and also in Europe and Asia during the past 50 years It is very sad to witness people again trying to establish the law of gravity after the work has

Until a few years ago, when this provincial attitude set in, "participation" was meant in the broad sense of worker involvement. Some of the research, such as the Taristock's worker in the fifties in the National Coal Board has spun-off and led to such development as the creative work. ignments as the creative work programme in the United States.

The conclusions of the research are clear : workers are more likely to accept change if they are involved in it and per-ticipate by using their intelli-gence and experience. This is a lesson that runs through such classic studies as Harwood and also indicated that the conclusions are not always certain and that workers may not wish to participate or want other people to do it for them.

The sad thing about the incredibly narrow definition of a participation by people these days is that it covers only worker boards—which are very suspect and enable very few workers actually to "participate ".

SLATER, WALKER SECURITIES

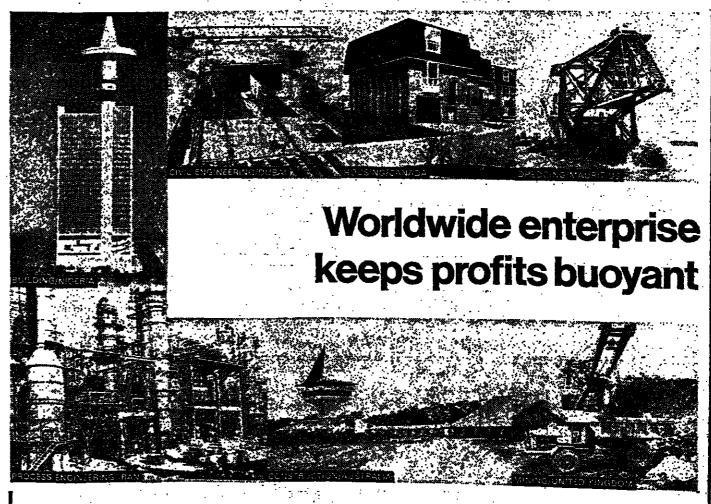

At the Annual General Meeting held on 30th May, 1974, Mr. J. D. Slater said:-

"Since 31st December, 1973, further realisations of important investments have been made by your Company. We have sold our investments in Blackburn Assurance Company, The Pioneer Life Assurance Company, Crittall-Hope Engineering, Slater, Walker of America, Slater Walker Australia and Slater, Walker Securities (South Africa), together with other investments and properties.

The cash proceeds of these realisations amount to some £40 million of which approximately £3.5 million has been applied in cancelling part of our long dated loan stocks.

Our policy of accumulating cash resources continues to engender takeover rumours and queries as to the future of your Company. Your directors consider that, in today's difficult financial conditions and in spite of the present rate of inflation, cash remains the optimum investment for the major part of your Company's available resources. In addition to being high yielding, cash is also a very flexible asset. Your Company is therefore now in a uniquely strong position to take advantage of favourable investment opportunities whenever they arise."

The severe and continuing declines are eroding investor confidence and most brokers admit that even if brighter times return many former market investors are likely to stay away for good. "Too many people have burnt their fingers too badly. They have just become deeply distilusioned,", said one leading broker in New York. It is this widespread view that partly explains the pessimism about the medium term outlook in the industry. Other key factors are disillusionment among institutions and even capital-hungry companies.

Views have differed greatly for the economy. They continue to differ and Wall Street abnots nothing so much as uncertainty. inflation and the First National City Bank talks of a deepening recession—as President Nixon tells the nation that there will he increasing real growth in the months ahead. What on earth is the Wall Street investor to believe?

Inflation is in double figures. Interest rates are moving around like a yo-yo and inves-tors are nervous, placing funds on short-rerm deposit, in works of art, coins, postage stamps, gold, silver, antiques—but defnitely not in shares.

Added to all this is the polituncertainty. President Nixon is fighting hard to survive and Washington seems preoccupied alone with Watergate. Mr George Shultz has left the Treasury, Mr Paul Volcker is leaving the Treasury and Mr Stein is expected to leave office scare people from the markets, there are other factors such as the growing anti-business senti-ment across the nation that is prompting Congress to impose increasing restrictions on big companies, to increase company axes and to press harder for greater anti-trust vigilance. Then finally, there is the real scepticism about the genuineness of corporate profits, as results tend to be distorted by, for example, inflation substan-tially increasing the value of inventories.

Brokerage companies are losing money and interest in brokerage company shares is very low, as most clearly reflected in the cheapness of these shares in the markets. Such financial hardship would possibly be tolerable if there was some element of brightness on the horizon.

If one takes an optimistic view, significant improvement in the economy will evident before long and Water-gate will be resolved one way or another within a few months. But these factors will not bring all the former inves-tors back, they will not stim-ulate massive institutional investments in the share markets and there will, quite possibly,

Behind the birth of a French banking giant

A banking group on a European scale with a vast network in Europe, the Middle East, South Africa and Asia comes into being today. It is the outcome of the merger of the funds and operations of the Bank of Indo-China on the one et de l'Union des Mines on the

The former, founded in 1875, operates in the Far East and the Pacific on a scale unparal-leled by any other continental bank. The Banque de Suez has developed out of the company which managed the Suez Canal until 1956 and its role has greatly developed in France and abroad in the last few years.

The new group will operate under the name of the "Bank of Indo-China and of Suez" from 1975 onwards and on the basis of 1973 figures has assets of between Frs.5,000m and 6,000m, according to the meth-ods of calculation used, that is to say a potential strength greater than that of the Banque de Paris et des Pays-Bas.

The decisions which were being endorsed, by the general shareholders' meetings this week, will consecrate the great-est financial merger carried out in France since the war. They will also mark the close of the struggle started by insurance groups for the control of the groups for the control of the Bank of Indo-China, which has ended with something of a defeat of the insurance firms by the banks, followed by a rainforcement of the banking

The Bank of Indo-China will contribute its banking and re-lated activities to a subsidiary called "Société de l'Indo-chine"; at the same time, the Compagnie Financière de Suez, which controls the Banque de Suez et de l'Union des Mines, will absorb the Bank of Indo-China old style. However, a second bank of Indo-China will remain in operation under the old name until 1975, when it will expand into the "Banque de l'Indochine et de Suez". This outcome is the result of old and active ties between the two groups. M Jacques Georges-Picot, a septuagenarian of powerful physical and moral stature, with long experience and the gift of leadership, had been successful in transforming the Compagnie Française de Suez, after the nationalization of the canal in 1956, into a dynamic business bank.

He had friendly personal relations with the Marquis Francois de Flers, also in his seven-number one in the Bank of Indo-China. He is the son of Robert de Flers, the writer.

In 1967, Suez had bought 6 to 7 per cent of the capital of the Bank of Indo-China, and the latter about 5 per cent of the capital of Suez. M Michel Caplain (59), inspecteur des finances and president of Suez in succession to M Georges-

Picot, who has become honorary president, displayed a pleasant urbanity in his frequent contacts with Messrs Maxime Robert and Dangelzer, two of the directors of the Banque de l'Indochine, and also inspecteurs des finances.

Both groups had interests in insurance. The Banque de l'In-dochine held 7 per cent of the shares of La Paternelle, which, on its side, had raised its parti-cipation in the Banque de l'In-dochine group from 7 to 22 per cent in 1969, following mysterious stock exchange operations and at the request of M de Flers, a friend of M Andre Burlot, president of La Pater-

It included in addition to La Paternelle, the Abeille, Abeille-Paix, and Prevoyance com-panies, as well as participations by the Suez and Indo-China The interweaving of banking and insurance interests was thereby reinforced. The opinion of the Finance Ministry at the time was that it was necessary to organize "against the day when British insurance would bear with all its weight on the Common Market ". The director of the AGP was M Bernard Pagezey, the representative of La Paternelle and a brilliant financier.

Because of the good relations between M Burlot and de Flers, and because the wind blew in favour of cooperation between insurance and banking, the Banque de l'Indochine group, alresdy linked finan-cially to La Paternelle, owned 7 per cent of the capital of the AGP. But the Suez group had directly or indirectly a 50 per cent interest in the AGP. If the Bank of Indo-China personal rivalries and dealings on the stock exchange. In 1971, La Paternelle tried to obtain the 7 per cent of the Banque de l'Indochine in the AGP to bar the road to Suez. But it came up against the Marquis de Flers. It counter-attacked, by buying up the 11 per cent of the capital in the per cent of the capital in the Banque de l'Indochine held by Baron Empain. The circumstances of this operation remain somewhat ob scure. One can, however, state that Baron Empain and de Flers had agreed that the 11 per cent would not be surren-dered without the Bank of Indo-China having the right of preemption. As La Paternelle had 22 per cent in this bank, its share thus rose to 33 per cent, that is to say, a power of veto.

In May 1972 the share prices of the Banque de l'Indochine became so favourable that various blocks of shares, varying sold to La Paternelle by their holders-notably by institu tional investors anxious to real ize their profits normally. The outcome was that La Pater-nelle's holding in the capital of the Banque de l'Indochine grew to 44.5 per cent.

Then came the counter-thrust of de Flers. He sold to Suez the key 7 per cent his bank held in the AGP. As a result, the Suez group, already controlling 50 per cent of the AGP, entirely dominated it with 57 per cent On May 18, 1972, the war came to an end with the dismissal of M Pagezy from the board of the AGP, which was regarded as having organized the operation against the Banque de l'Indo-chine. This led to the break-up of the "Assurances du Groupe de Paris".

attempted to control a bank. It was the bankers who took con trol of insurance companies and created a financial giant, the future "Banque de l'Indo-chine et de Suez".

The question now is whether French bankers can, as they plan—now that the threat of M Mitterrand's nationalizations has blown over—achieve a similar to that of French indus-

This qualification relates to two strands in the association's history, the need to keep competitive and the will to provide an "open door" into the pro-fession.

Association members, for instance, do not have to serve articles, which has helped generations of men and women to qualify who could not find the price of a premium or did not fancy the pay and the immobility of being tied to a practice.

Founded in 1904, the association became five years later the first accountancy body to admit a woman, Ethel Ayres Purdie and in 1971, the first to elect a woman council member, Vera Ci Palma who writes on tax for the Business News Personal Investment and Finance pages.

The association has recently raised its minimum membership qualifications from five "O." to two "A" levels, so the institute which requires four "O" levels will still enable as many people as possible to get an accountancy qualification. As just one of the six major accommuncy bodies at a time when there is a national shortage of accountants, the association feels the institute puts it one step ahead.

Sparking row

White-collar staff at ICI have just been balloted by the Com-mission on Industrial Relations, on the orders of the National Industrial Relations Court, on which trade union, if any, they would like to represent them. Their choice has been complicated by the fact that one of the unions suggested on the ballot paper does not exist.
What the CIR meant to include among the choices of outside union who could represent white-collar staff was the staff section of the Electrical, Electronic and Telecommunications/ Plumbing Trade Union, which is correctly called the Electrical and Engineering Staff Associa-tion. Instead, the ballot paper carried the name of a mythical organization called the Elec-tricians' Staff Association. It is, perhaps, a small point, but it has incensed the real elechortage of accountants, the tricians' union which feels that, issociation feels the institute by being confronted with the wrong title, ICI staff might not Rees is one of the association's realize that they do in fact rep-

Rice believes that his union could have lost several hundred potential members, if ICI eventually agrees to negotiate with its staff through recognized unions instead of through the present, widely disliked, staff committee system.

The error on the CIR's part is perhaps understandable, as staff at the Commission have other things on their mind at the moment including their own overtime ban in support of better redundancy terms when the CIR bites the dust under Michael Foor's Industrial Relations Repeal Bill later this year.

The 65 contract staff at the CIR who are not established civil servants have been offered a week's pay for each year of service; instead they want the unexpired portions of their con-tracts which are mostly for three years paid in full.

Under the present terms they reckon that half of the staff will receive severance of less than 5300 and they are particularly annoyed that Foot's Repeal Bill another association sponsored great apostles of integration resent a wide range of foremen makes specific provision for the venture, the Institute of between these six, but he is and supervisory grades, not all compensation of CIR Commis Accounting Staff. The merger trend now in full swing partly reflects this situation but it is also a product of the organization of the securi-ties industry.

A consolidated tape is being established and improved com-munications between the country's stock exchanges are being developed. The central market system that will result will effectively place all markets on a par with each other; it will eliminate arbitrage business among brokers.

What market experts are talking about most now, when looking to the future, is the ending of fixed commission rates, effective next May. This move, says an executive with the other day in the Wali Street Journal, will produce a situation where "in five or 10 years it'll be Merrill Lynch, a few other big houses and a few bounques catering to select institutional er clients.'

The ending of fixed rates hey have already been dropped on $300,000 and on trades under $2,000) will produce the sort of extremely tough competition that this industry has rarely seen before and which few companies can now really surmount on their own.

Wall Street will continue survive, but the industry is in the midst of a major shake-up. No one quite dares forecast what is going to happen. Maybe, as one broker put it, "We'll muddle along for a few years, the market will languish, many of us will go out of business and then sometime, a few years from now, people will discover that stocks and shares are fun and the golden days will be back".

Beauford Group Order Books at Record Levels

From the statement by the Chairman, Mr. G. Crawford, for the year ended 31 December, 1973

Our second year as a public company has resulted in an increase in turnover from £2.25m to £2.36m (4.8%) and an increase in pre-tax profits from £290,655 to £312,686 (7.5%). These results are somewhat below our expectations, due principally, to difficulties encountered towards the end of 1973, in common with the rest of the engineering industry, in obtaining supplies of materials. In consequence, completion of certain orders was delayed beyond the end of the financial

During the past two years approximately half a million pounds has, on the whole, been directed towards equipping the engineering side for handling bigger contracts and has thus opened wider markets for its skills. The growth of the machine tool division has been particularly pleasing, and the machine tool division has been particularly pleasing, and the introduction of the heavier type of machine into our range of machine tools has been well received. Planned development of the range of machine tools manufactured by the division is now taking place to ensure it keeps abreast of current and foreseeable market requirements. During the year, the Group's exports amounted to over 20% of turnover and the present opportunities in the export field are not being neglected. The Group's order books are at record levels and the Board is satisfied that the financial resources available are adequate to finance the activity expected during the year. In the light of these considerations, I am confident that, in the absence of unforeseen circumstances, the remainder of the year will produce satisfactory results.

Amalgamated Power blown off course by second-half slump

A year ago Amalgamated Power Engineering, a Bradford group which makes steam rurbines and diesel engines, set itself a target for 1973 of improving turnover by 10 per cent and at the same time maintain-ing its margins.

At halfway, with profits up 25 per cent on turnover only 5 per cent greater ahead, the company looked well on the way to achieving its goal; but a poor second half, with profits down 26 per cent, put paid to that. In the first half at least the order position was buoyant, but the company was forced to buy the company was forced to buy materials abroad.

One part of the objective was in fact, comfortably attained with the total turnover growing 15 per cent to £29.1m. But the pre-tax outrum dipped 5 per cent to almost £2.3m, bringing to an end the upward curve in profits from the low point of £634,000 in 1970.

For once the slip cannot be blamed on interest charges, which fell slightly to £178,000 and are deducted from a trading profit (including interest received) which itself declined by 5 per cent to £2.47m. Statistically, the pre-tax rose from £984,000 to £1.23m in the first six months. but the first six months, but slumped from £1.44m to just

Slater Walker dominates market

The stock market found no comfort in yesterday's batch of announcements from major trading companies and share prices suffered a fresh round of losses in thin trading. The overnight setback on Wall Street provided yet another reason for investment caution. The FT index closed 4.6 points down at 282.0 and The Times index 1.23 off at 112.84.

The market's day was dominated by the annual meeting of Slater Walker Securities where Mr Slater's comments on the

Mr Slater's comments on the outlook for his group—and for the stock market—were eagerly awaited. Shares in SWS closed of at 134p after reports from the meeting but had swayed between 138p and 130p.

The quarterly report from BP, containing profits heavily dis-torted by special factors, left the shares 5½p off at 458½p. Market sources pointed out that, in view of Wall Street's 19 point loss, BP shares had done well in London.

With London bullion prices rising again, together with news of political moves to allow United States citizens to hold gold, there was renewed demand for South African mining issues. Turnover was modest, but gains of £1 and more brought Buffels-fontein to £161 and FS Geduld

Tiger Oats aims to block Dalgety Gillespie, the Industry, Trade

The potential opposition of Tiger Oats & National Milling Tiger Oats & National Milling of South Africa to Dalgety's proposed f5m takeover of Crosfields & Calthrop has now materialized. Tiger Oats informed the board of C & C yesterday that it will vote against the proposed scheme of arrangement to effect the deal. With its subsidiaries, Tiger Oats owns about 9.8 per cent of the C & C equity. Advised by Old Broad Street Securities, Tiger Oats said it is acting in the best long-term interests of its own members. and Commerce Minister, said the government would be exercising its option because foreign control had hindered development. He said it was not intended to operate the company on more than an interim basis and the government would seek to bave it purchased and operated by government is also planning to buy Canadair, a subsidiary of General Dynamics Corpora-

Threefold leap at Blyth Greene

Profits of Blyth Greene, Jourdain the London-based merchant bankers and general mer chants in 1973 not only exceeded the forecast fim by a handsome margin but showed a threefold increase on those returned for 1972. There is no further news on the intention six months ago to come to the market next Boosted by much improved chanting interests and other group divisions pre-tax profits jumped from £395,000 to £1.27m the second half producing no less than £770,000 against £251,000 last year. Profits after tax worked out to £651,000 against £227,000 of which the attributable balance was £561,000 against only £28,000.

Earnings a share rose from 9.2p to 31.9p.

Odex Racasan

On the back of sales up from £3.78m to £4.38m, taxable profits of Odex Racasan, the Cheshire-based makers of hygiene products, show a 20 per cent gain from £494,000 to £595,000. The total dividend is raised from equal to 4.59m to 4.82m. The equal to 4.59p to 4.82p. The board say that on the basis of current assumptions about future marker conditions and nature of government controls after Phase Three, profits for 1974-75 should be satisfactory and future cash flow presents no problems.

Ellis & Everard

For several months last year before being confronted with a £10m bid from Unilever (subsequently defeated) builders' merchant Ellis & Everard was having talks with ICI on developing closer links in the loping closer links in merchanting of chemicals.

The deal has now gone through with ICI paying £700.000 cash for 30 per cent of E & E (Chemicals), specialists in "small lot." deliveries in the United Kingdom.

McNeill Group

Taxable profits of the McNeill Group have expanded from £411,000 to a £593,000 record on turnover up from £5.41m to £7.5m.

On net profits up from £244,000 to £308,000 the dividend is being increased from 2.94p to 3.Sp with the Treasury's consent. Earnings a share are 13.2p (10.7p).

L & CS, Hartley Baird inspectors named

Inspectors have been appointed by Mr Peter Shore, Trade Minister, on the affairs of London & County Securities Group and Hartley Baird.

Mr Alistair Troup is to act with the two appointed in September, Mr J. Hazan, QC. and Mr T. Harding, to inquire in Hartley Baird and its ownership, particularly the controlling particularly the controlling interest of Dr W. K. Waller-steiner and his mother, or any other company controlled by them,

Mr Leggatt, QC, and Mr David Hobson will act as inspectors to investigate and report on the membership of London & County. The appointment was made at the request of Mr Leggatt and Mr Hobson, who were appointed in January to investigate the company.

Heavy capital flow from US

The removal of American capital controls at the end of January led to a huge net capital outflow from the United States which probably amounted to between $5,000m and $5,500m, according to Morgan Guaranty Trust in its latest edition of World Financial Markets.

The bulk of the movement, the bank says, took the form of bank-related capital outflows. Total American bank claims on non-residents probably in-creased by $4,500m-$5,000m between February and April. Bank advances rose by nearly $2,500m and acceptances by about

2,000m, with transfers head offices to over branches adding perhaps a ther $500m. Be far the largest single of the outflow some two this was accounted for by Japan ese commercial banks and, to lesser extent, Japanese con panies. For much of the perio panies. For index of the penne up to the end of April Morgan points out, short-term credin terms were more attractive to the Japanese in the United States than in the Eurocurrency market. Some liquid funds were move Some inquisitions were moved abroad by American residents into higher yielding short-term instruments. This outflow may have reached $1,500m; the bulk going into London dollar certificates of deposit.

Flows in the opposite direction were much smaller. American were much smaller.

banks are estimated to have in creased their liabilities to thei foreign branches by between $1,000m and $3,000m.

A spokesman told Reuter that operating profit was almost ril (39,605m yen) because of poor sales and a sharp rise in material costs.

However, the non-operating account, which comes mainly from interest and dividends from other companies, yielded a profit of more than 4,000m yen and the company expects to repeat a dividend of 4 yen.

D-mark firmer against dollar

The Deutsche mark ended yester-day's fureign exchange trading slightly firmer against the dealer although most other Employed currencies weakened against the United States unit in subdued activity.

United States unit in subduell activity.

The German carrency closed at 2.5415.30 against the dollar, our-pared with 2.5500.40 descringing as it reversed its recent sharp refreat ahead of today's Paris meeting between the new French and West German leaders.

However, the mark remained substantially weaker than last week, when it moved between about 2.4550 and 2.4550. Anxiety that the Paris meeting may produce measures to curb German exports in the hope of furthering European unity continued to influence trading in the German unit, dealers moted.

However, the dollar generally held its firmer trend. Sterling rose 10 points to $2.3330. Its effective rate widened from 15.89 to 16.91 per cent.

Easier day in Lombard St

It was a very much easier day in Lombard Street yesterday. "Calling" was again light, although houses were bidding 11; or 11; per cent at the outset, perhaps conscious that today is expected to be a very short day, withen month settlements working against the market.

But as the morning processed.

But, as the morning progressed, so rates eased to 11 or 113 percent, and with fresh funds becoming more readily available late in the day, final balances were picked up in the range of 103 to 113 percent. For the first time this week, the authorities were not required to assist the market.

Banks had carried over very large balances from Wednesday, while there was an excess of Government disbursements over revenue transdisbursements over revenue trans-fers to the Exchequer, and there was a drop in the note circulation.

UDT is continuing its expansion to the banking and financial field. As a result, we are looking for three experienced Secretaries for the following posts:

our management Services Department needs an Administrative Assistant to be responsible for running a small office where there are two Secretaries. The office provides an administrative and secretarial service to a team of internal consultants. The Assistant will also act as Personal Secretary to the Manager of the department and will, therefore, need good basic shorthand and typing akills. This position is likely to interest a Secretary who would like to do more than purely secretarial work.

The other two poers are for Service Secretarial work.

The other two posts are for Senior Secretaries to be based at our new offices at Newgate Street (near St. Paul's). We are looking for a Secretary for the Managing Director of a major subsidiary company and also for a Director of the same company. Both men require Secretaries who will become involved in their work and provide them with a full secretarial These posts are likely to attract people in their mid twenties to early thirties. Attractive salaries plus competitive fringe benefits are offered.
